The message sent by Chairman of the State Administration Council of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the ceremony to mark the 74th Anniversary of Chin National Day

20 February 2022

Esteemed ethnic national brethren in Chin State,

Today's 20 February is the 74th Anniversary of Chin National Day which is significant and auspicious for all Chin ethnics residing in Chin State and other various regions. On the significant day of Chin ethnics, I extend greetings with a wish to all ethnic national people including Chin ethnics to enjoy physical and mental well-being cheerfully.

A public conference held in Falam of Chin State decided to change the Saopha administration to the democratic administration system on 20 February 1948 when the country regained Independence. The seventh Chin Affairs Council conference held in Yangon on 9 October 1950 sought the wishes of all attendee Chin representatives over the motions to designate Chin National Day. The day 20 February, when the public conference that was held in Falam, was set as the "Chin National Day". Hence, the Chin National Day starting from 1948 turns 74 years this year. The Chin National Day is a significant day for languages, culture, historical traditions and customs in common with all Chin ethnicities.

Yangon public rental housing to become worth living estate

IN the vast field of land, the modern construction machinery, labourers, technicians and experts are spreading and moving around the construction areas. In the same scene, there are many nearly completed buildings and under-construction buildings.

These buildings are being constructed by the government for those people who cannot afford to buy a house. This big estate is located near No 7 Road and No 2 Road, Laydaunkan village, Dagon Myothit (South) Township, Yangon Region.

"This project aims to address the impact on the construction sector during the COVID-19 period, to create job opportunities and to assist the families in reducing the costs of apartment rents," said U Win Naing, the deputy director of the Urban and Housing Development Department with the Ministry of Construction. Demand for housing in the densely populated cities is rising year by year as more and more people are moving from one region to another in the hope of having better job opportunities with the population growing every year.

Besides, people who cannot afford to buy flats are suffering from rising rental costs in privately owned estates.

Currently, even the developed countries have been suffering from the effects of the pandemic. Myanmar as a developing country naturally face a similar effect, people being more likely to lose their jobs, their income decreasing and it is thus almost impossible to afford to rent a flat.

In its geographical conditions, Chin State is teeming with locations of natural resources and underground and above ground resources such as the western mountain range stretching from the north to the south, the Kaladan River flowing into the Bay of Bengal, the Natma Hill as habitats of rare plants and animals, the Khonuamthung Hill, the Kennedy Peak which was famous in the Second World War, the beautiful Reed Lake, the streaming Manipur River, Bwenu River and the Bungtla Waterfall.

Our country is a residence for various ethnic national people amicably living for many years. However, due to colonization and invasion of some world powerful countries in the 19th century, British colonialists occupied the whole of Myanmar in 1885 and separately ruled the hilly and plain areas. The Chin ethnic people who did not wish to accept the slavery acts in the aggressive occupation of foreigners cooperated with other ethnic nationals in waging against colonialists. In battling colonialists, the patriotic spirit of Chin national leaders Bo Kyum Bik and Bi Khai Kam who joined hand in hand with various ethnics born of the Union in fighting the colonialists is an honourable historical tradition of Chin State.

As honorary examples, ethnic leaders such as U Hlur Hmung, U Thawng Za Khup and U Kio Mang, who signed the Panglong Agreement on 12 February 1947, expressed the genuine Union spirit of Chin State.

History proves that national unity and the nationalistic spirit are of importance for our country which is home to various ethnic nationals in unison. All ethnic national people residing in the Union through thick and thin sharing the future altogether need to safeguard the State in all aspects through the genuine patriotic spirit. If so, the country will be perpetually peaceful and prosperous with development, standing tall among the global countries.

Currently, riots, the violation of the law and sabotages breaking up the State in various parts of the nation, including Chin State, are very dangerous for the nation. Understanding the real root causes of instability and knowing the acts of saboteurs to disintegrate the State and acts of internal and external destructionists, all need to prevent these destructive acts.

I'd like to urge you all that now is the time to ensure peace and development of the Union through the genuine patriotic spirit and harmoniously cooperate with each other in building the Union based on democracy and federalism in accord with the aspiration of the people.

The State Administration Council has adopted a vow to successfully implement the political, social and economic objectives and the five-point road map during the prescribed period when it takes the State responsibilities. The government is emphasizing the restoration of internal peace and ceasefire across the nation. As peace, stability and the rule of law are crucial in the development of the nation and nation-building endeavours, I'd like to request all the ethnic national people to join hands with the government in further maintaining peace and stability and ending armed conflicts for the development of the nation.

The government in its part is carrying out the management for opening and upgrading of more basic education schools to develop human resources in Chin State, repairing educational buildings, constructing new buildings and appointing more teachers while establishing more hospitals and clinics and deploying assignment of medical doctors for providing healthcare services to the local people.

Moreover, the government arranges the supply of electricity from the national grid aspired by people from Chin State to various parts of the state. In order to improve the transport facilities, the highways with easy access to the mainland and local roads of the state are being extended. In addition, the development of the Kaladan River Basin which can connect foreign countries from Chin State through the waterway and the construction of the Paletwa Port are being undertaken. These projects are sound foundations for the socio-economic development of the ethnic national people from Chin State in the future.

Although transport difficulties based on natural geographical conditions as well as high hilly areas in Chin State cause hindrances to development tasks, the government is trying hard to fulfil the needs for the development of the state as much as possible. Hence, the ethnic national people residing in Chin State need to cooperate with the Union government and the Chin State government in development tasks.

Participation of all ethnic nationals in equal terms of rights is of great importance in shaping the Republic of the Union of Myanmar to be a peaceful, prosperous, modern and developed Union based on democracy and federalism. So, I hereby send a message and I'd like to urge all ethnic national people residing in Chin State in unison in nation-building tasks.

Yangon public rental housing to become worth . . .

“Even in the past, we had difficulty saving K100,000 per month for house rent. Now, my husband does not have a regular job because of COVID-19. My salary has been reduced by half and we have to move to another affordable dormitory next month,” said Ma Shwe Sin, who rents a house near the Dagon Seikkan Industrial Zone.

In order to improve the socio-economic life of the people and create job opportunities through the construction sector, the Ministry of Construction is implementing public rental housing projects in Yangon, Mandalay, and Nay Pyi Taw, the densely populated cities.

About 3,104-unit public rental estate project in Yangon will be implemented on a 174-acre plot of land and it will include four five-storey buildings with 194 flats.

The government has invested millions of kyats in the project and they expect to recover the costs by renting the buildings to the public for a long-term period.

Upon completion of the project, the tenants will be able to live in the housing estate at an affordable rental price.

“According to a 50-year investment calculation, the rents are likely to be around K50,000 per month. The costs of the project haven’t been finalized and it is just an estimated rental price,” said Deputy Director U Win Naing.

Each unit of the public rental housing will be 650 square feet wide. Each apartment contains two bedrooms, one living room and one bathroom. The project area also includes the market, school, clinic, playground and park.

Efforts will be made to be able to lease some of the completed apartments in the project areas by 2022. Now, the finished units are being installed with electricity and water supply facilities.

The applications for renting flats from the public rental housing project will be officially invited to the public. Any family renting the houses in 33 townships in Yangon City Development Zone can apply.

This housing project is open to everyone. Employees will not be given the first priority by this project. Those who are living in the private rental houses need to show the documents that they are currently living in the rented houses, explained U Win Naing.

Public rental housing projects were first started in 1951. The 11 public rental housing estates have been implemented, which include Yankin housing, U Wisara housing, Lanthit housing, Weluwan housing and Kandawlay housing among others.

The public rental housing project, currently being developed to meet the demand of the houses for the people, will no longer be allowed to stay for a long period as it used to be but will be allowed to be rented only for a limited period.

“Some people thought that they would own those apartments. The project is a rental housing project. So, nobody will own the buildings. The flats will be rented for a fixed period of five to eight years,” said the deputy director.

“It is not easy to buy a house in this situation. As we have to rent a house, we are glad to hear that we will be able to live with low rents. Hopefully, they will scrutinize the applications thoroughly,” said Ma Shwe Sin. — Nadi Min/GNLM

Muse border trade drastically plummets to $500 mln as of 11 Feb

THE value of cross-border trade between Myanmar and China via a major trading hub Muse border post plunged to US$500 million as of 11 February 2022 of the current mini-budget period (October 2021- March 2022), Myanmar Customs Department's statistics indicated.

The figure significantly dropped from $2.245 billion recorded in the corresponding period of last Financial Year, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

Between 1 October 2021 and 4 February 2022, Myanmar's exports to China through the Muse land border were valued at $478 million, while imports are worth $22 million. The trade showed a slump in both exports and imports against the year-ago period.

At present, the traders are anticipated for the resumption of the Kyalgaung post which performed the largest trade volume between Myanmar and China in the previous years. The post has been shut down since March 2021. The COVID-19 preventive measures have been taken at the post and Kyalgaung is rumoured to be reopened in mid-March or late March, a trader engaged in Kyalgaung quoted in his sayings.

The Muse border post witnessed $4.057 billion worth of the Sino-Myanmar border trade last financial year 2020-2021, including exports worth $2.9 billion and imports worth $1.15 billion.

China shut down all the checkpoints linking to the Muse border amidst the COVID-19 pandemic. The checkpoints next to the Muse border are Nantaw, Sinphyu, Mang Wein (Kyalgaung), Kyinsankyawt-Wang Ding and Panseng-Wang Ding. Of the checkpoints, Kyinsankyawt has resumed the trading activity from 26 November on a trial run. Myanmar daily delivers rubber, various beans and pulses, dried plum, watermelon, muskmelon and other food commodities to China through Kyinsankyawt with the use of a Chinese short-haul trucking service.

"Myanmar trucks are restricted to enter China side. However, there is a shortage of Chinese truck drivers. At present, the traders are offering a competitive price for their goods, forcing Chinese drivers to manipulate the pricing. Only Chinese drivers and operators can take advantage of this case. Myanmar truckers cannot help doing it," U Min Thein, the vice-chairman of the Muse Rice Wholesale Centre, stressed.

As a result of this, the cost of Chinese short-haul trucking tremendously rose to K10 million per truck, whereas the trucking was worth only K700,000-800,000 when Myanmar truckers were allowed to enter China. Only when China eases the restriction can the trucking rate drop, he stated.

Additionally, China's new Customs regulation and mandatory quarantine process posed some hurdles in the border market. Traders cannot expect trade facilitation according to the changes in China's policy during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Myanmar exports agricultural products including rice, beans and corns, and fishery products such as crab, prawn, etc. Furthermore, Myanmar's natural gas export to China is also conducted through the Muse-Ruili border. The raw CMP materials, electrical appliances and consumer goods are imported into the country.

Peanut prices edge up on edible oil price rally

THE price of peanuts remains the upward trend on the back of strong domestic demand and the price rise in the edible oil market, according to the Mandalay wholesale market.

Tracking the price hike of imported palm oil and Kyat depreciation against the US dollar, the price of palm oil rises tremendously to nearly K6,000 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) in the domestic market. Consequently, the consumers' behaviour has changed and turned to peanut oil due to the health benefits amidst the increase in imported oil prices.

Following the high demand of the local millers, the prices of peanut moved in the range of K2,900-3,300 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes), Mandalay market's price statistics indicated.

At present, it is highly demanded in the domestic market rather than the Chinese market.

Myanmar oil body has been planning to export peanut oil produced in line with Good Agriculture Practices (GAP) and Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP).

There are about 300 oil millers in Mandalay, of whom only 50 hold FDA certification, while the rest have been unable to meet the FDA criteria.

The Myanmar Edible Oil

Millers Association plans to help millers in the entire supply chain get approved by the Food and Drug Administration, to eradicate illegal sales in the market and ensure a strong market for producers.

It also helps millers earn the trust of consumers and place them in a better position to compete with other oil brands being sold in the domestic market, said Mandalay oil millers.

The domestic consumption of edible oil is estimated at one million tonnes per year. The local cooking oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. To meet the self-sufficiency in the domestic market, about 700,000 tonnes of cooking oil are yearly imported.

Myanmar's peanuts are mostly exported to China. Between 1 October 2021 and 11 February 2022 of the current mini-budget period, approximately $40 million worth of over 43,000 tonnes of peanuts were shipped to the external market, Myanmar Customs Department's statistics showed.

Myanmar has exported US$190.7 million worth more than 160,776 tonnes of peanuts to the foreign trade partners last financial year 2020-2021, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

Myanmar's rice export to Sri Lanka fetches high prices

MYANMAR'S rice export to Sri Lanka is fetching high prices than other countries and the shipment of the rice export is also convenient, said U Than Oo, the secretary of Bayintnaung Rice Wholesale Depot.

Although the freight-on-board (FOB) price of rice exported to other countries is between US$ 340-$350 per tonne, the export price to Sri Lanka varies from $440 to $450 per tonne.

"Myanmar's rice was exported to Sri Lanka last years. It has been successful. It is one of the neighbouring countries. Myanmar can also export the rice to Sri Lanka through maritime route," said U Than Oo.

Besides, the rice export to Sri Lanka is less restrictive compared to the other countries, he added.

"Sri Lanka hasn't limited the rice quality. The export of Ah Twe and Ahmahtet rice from Myanmar are acceptable. The European countries and China have many restrictions such as AQSIQ and certificates to export Myanmar rice. So, they are a little bit complicated," said U Than Oo.

Currently, two countries' governments signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) on 7 January to export 100,000 tonnes of white rice and 50,000 tonnes of parboiled rice to Sri Lanka in two consecutive years (2022 and 2023).

"This export of rice is yearly led by the MRF. So, the traders and exporters exported the rice to Sri Lanka. Now, it's time to harvest the summer paddy, said U Than Oo.

At present, there is a less stockpile of monsoon paddy in the rice market and the newly harvested summer paddy will enter the market pretty soon.

About 30,000 or 40,000 bags of rice and low-quality rice flowed daily into the Bayintnaung Rice Wholesale Depot, one of the main export markets through the maritime route.

From 1 October to 31 January in this financial year, the country exported over 1 million tonnes of rice and low-quality rice. Of which, China is becoming a large net importer of Myanmar rice, according to the Myanmar Rice Federation. — NN/GNLM

Pomelo growers need technical assistance, market support

THE pomelo growers earnestly desire to get market access and seek technical assistance in their efforts for agricultural supply and value chain processes.

An official of the Myanmar Pomelo Producers and Exporters Association stated that we cannot raise the price in the domestic market only although the pomelos are cultivated under the Good Agricultural Practices. The awareness campaigns for the GAP system are required to encourage the growers to adopt the GAP system.

“I like to call for the government’s support regarding technical assistance”, he quoted in his sayings.

At present, of 15,000 acres of pomelo cultivation, over 300 acres in Bag Region and 20 acres in Mon State used GAP system only. Conventional farming covers the remaining acres.

across the states and regions. However, they can solely rely on the domestic market for now. Only when the growers practice the GAP system widely can they explore foreign markets. The GAP certificate is a must in the

The GAP adoption and certificate are required to penetrate more external markets and the international markets prefer the fruits produced under the GAP system. The GAP ensures food safety, and the GAP growers can get more market access, locally and internationally, according to the Agriculture Department.

In addition to food safety, GAP also ensures worker safety, health and welfare, and conservation of the environment.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation has encouraged farmers to use its GAP protocol in a bid to boost productivity, profitability, market access, and competitiveness in the agricultural sector. The Agriculture Department will raise awareness of GAP among growers by providing courses. The GAP protocol and guidelines include the most consumed and major export items — mango, pomelo, honeydew, watermelon, avocado, chilli, tomato, onion, cabbage, corn, sesame, various beans, rice, and coffee. — Ko Naing/GNLM Pwintphyu township is one of the most irrigation water areas out of 25 townships of the Magway region. The local people are mainly engaging the agriculture business using the Maezali dam.

To prevent irrigated water shortage for local farmers in growing crops, the Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department is providing the irrigated water through the South Mone Myaungmagyi and North Mone Myaungmagyi. Consequently, the local farmers are thriving in the crop sector.

Pwintphyu township agriculture department is providing necessary farming methods and input to increase the crops yield during the winter crop season. Besides, the staff from the department are closely monitoring and supporting pest

Shape Chin State to be peaceful, stable and prosperous

THE day 20th February is the 74th Anniversary of Chin State Day which is significant and auspicious for all Chin ethnics residing in Chin State and other various regions of the nation.

A public conference held in Falam of Chin State decided to change the Saopha administration to the democratic administration system on 20 February 1948. Honouring a great change of administrative system, Chin State Day was set on 20 February.

Chin State is endowed with natural resources such as the Kaladan River, the Natma Hill, the Khonuamthung Hill, the Kennedy Peak, the beautiful Reed Lake, the streaming Manipur River, the Wenu River and the Bungtla Waterfall.

British colonialists occupied the whole of Myanmar in 1885 and separately ruled the hilly and plain areas. The Chin ethnic people who did not wish to accept the colonial rule in the aggressive occupation of foreigners cooperated with other ethnic nationals in wading out the colonialists. In history, Chin national leaders Bo Kyum Bik and Bo Khai Kam showed off their brilliant patriotic spirit.

As honorary examples, ethnic leaders such as U Hlur Hmung, U Thawng Za Khup and U Kio Mang, who signed the Panglong Agreement on 12 February 1947, expressed the genuine Union spirit of Chin State.

All ethnic national people residing in the Union through thick and thin sharing the future altogether need to safeguard the State in all aspects through the genuine patriotic spirit. If so, the country will be perpetually peaceful and prosperous with development, standing tall among the global countries.

Now is the time to ensure peace and development of the Union through the genuine patriotic spirit and harmoniously cooperate with each other in building the Union based on democracy and federalism in accord with the aspiration of the people.

People from Chin State need to strive for the emergence of educated persons on whom the state and local people can rely. Those educated persons need to initiate the development of Chin State in all aspects. They should lead the local people in the improvement of their socio-economic life.

To do so, Chin State needs to restore peace and tranquillity. If so, the whole area will be prosperous for future generations of the state. Let's all the ethnic national people in Chin State make utmost efforts for the creation of good environs for the people!

MANY Japanese are interested in watching the Beijing Olympics, which began on 4 February. Not only athletes and their families, but also the general public who have never consulted, and people who are not good at exercising are watching every day. That's because there are many people all over Japan who "play", "watch", "support" and "make a business" in sports. Modern Japanese education policy has emphasized the development of human resources with a strong mind, solid skill, and tough body. From the age of six to the age of 18 when graduating from high school, physical education is incorporated into the school curriculum in the same way as mathematics and Japanese. Children with outstanding talent were trained by their parents and school coaches as athletes, and some became athletes. However, in recent years, more and more people are paying attention to sports in a new and different way. The Japanese government established the Japan Sports Agency in 2015 to create a system for fostering sports as an industry. The government's job is to create a system and law and to grasp the sports market numerically by adopting the idea of Sports Satellite Accounts (SSA), which numerically expresses the economic scale of the sports industry. The sports market is including building stadiums, developing tools, developing nutritious health foods, treating athletes, and everything else involved. Now athletes team up with experts to improve the environment, improve performance, develop goods and services with manufacturers, and gain financial corporation from supporting companies. And Sport Satellite Accounts are expanding their share of GDP. The volume of the sports market expanded from about 9.6 trillion yen in 2011 to 12.3 trillion yen in 2018, with a positive growth of about 2.7 trillion yen. The ratio of sports GDP to the total nominal GDP of Japan increased from 1.4 per cent in 2011 to 1.57 per cent in 2018. The ratio of increase in sports GDP from the previous year continues to be at a positive level. With such stable growth, the Japanese government has high expectations for private companies related to sports.

WHO chief calls for cooperation, financing to end COVID-19 pandemic

THE World Health Organization (WHO) Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus on Friday called for cooperation and collaboration in the face of common threats from the COVID-19 pandemic. The WHO chief made the remarks at a panel discussion titled "Get Well Soon: Finding a Way Out of the Pandemic" during the ongoing Munich Security Conference (MSC) here in the southern German city of Munich.

He described as "dangerous" the narrative that the pandemic was over with high vaccine coverage in some countries and denied claims that the Omicron coronavirus variant was less severe. "We can end the COVID-19 pandemic as a global health emergency this year. We have the tools. We have the know-how," he argued.

Tedros called on all countries to fill the urgent financing gap of 16 billion US dollars for the Access to COVID-19 Tools (ACT) Accelerator to make vaccines, tests, treatments and personal protective

The ACT-Accelerator was established in April 2020, just weeks after the pandemic was declared, to speed up the development and access to COVID-19 tests, treatments and vaccines. The global vaccine solidarity initiative COVAX is one of its four pillars. "Compared with the costs of another year of economic turmoil, 16 billion dollars is, frankly, peanuts," he said.

According to Tedros, substantial resources for strengthening global health security were needed both nationally and globally. "Ending this pandemic must remain our focus. At the same time, we must learn the lessons it is teaching us." "In fact, the conditions are ideal for more transmissible, more dangerous variants to emerge," he told his fully masked audience.

Strengthen the global health security architecture could only succeed by attaching importance to the role of the WHO rather than creating new mechanisms, which he believed would only create further fragmentation and potentially leave the world less safe. Confusion and incoherence have fueled the pandemic, he said, stressing that "we need cooperation and collaboration in the face of common threats." Stronger systems and tools are required to prevent, detect and respond rapidly to epidemics and pandemics.

IAEA wraps up first trip to monitor Fukushima water release

THE International Atomic Energy Agency said Friday it made “significant progress” on its first mission to review the planned release of treated water from Japan’s Fukushima nuclear plant.

Since Monday, an IAEA taskforce has been in Japan to assess the country’s plan to gradually release the water, which has been processed to remove most radioactive elements, into the ocean.

The organization’s deputy director-general Lydie Evrard said the international team including non-IAEA experts had examined early preparations at the site for the release, expected to begin as soon as March next year.

“The IAEA taskforce made significant progress in its work this week to get a better understanding of Japan’s operational and regulatory plans for the discharge of the treated water,” she told reporters.

More than a million tonnes of liquid, including rain, groundwater and water used for cooling, has accumulated in tanks at the crippled Fukushima plant since it went into meltdown after a tsunami in 2011, and space is running out. The IAEA has already endorsed the release, which it says is similar to wastewater disposal at nuclear plants elsewhere.

But neighbouring countries have expressed environmental and safety concerns, and local fishing communities are opposed, fearing it will undermine years of work to restore their reputation.

The water is treated but some radioactive elements including tritium remain. Experts say there is no evidence that would pose any danger, but opponents want the plan blocked.

Evrard said the taskforce collected water samples and gathered technical information on the trip and will release its findings in late April, the first of several reports in a multi-year review.

Ahead of the press conference on Friday, Greenpeace said it had “low expectations” for the taskforce’s investigation, calling for alternative options to the release to be explored.—AFP ■

Germany requires transformation of all sectors to achieve climate neutrality: expert panel

GERMANY should adopt a more concrete, coherent and forward-looking climate policy, the government’s expert panel on climate protection said on Friday.

In its first annual report, the Wissenschaftsplattform Klimaschutz said that the goal of greenhouse gas neutrality, which Germany aims to achieve by 2045, requires an “accelerated and far-reaching transformation of all sectors”.

Germany’s climate protection governance must be further aligned with that of Europe, and the country’s climate action plan and programmes must become law, the report adds.

Meanwhile, emissions trading, as proposed by the European Commission for the buildings and transport sectors, should be supported to ensure that its scope is expanded to “match that of the German fuel emissions trading system”.

Since climate policy depends on support from society, the German government should “make greater use of measures from which all citizens can benefit equally,” such as promoting climate-neutral mobility, says the report. In order to meet its climate targets, the use of renewable energies should be tripled annually, Wissenschaftsplattform Klimaschutz explains, but the country still lacks a strategy for importing renewable energies.—Xinhua ■

Millions at home, no power, debris everywhere: storm Eunice halts Europe

STORM Eunice killed at least eight people in Europe on Friday, pummeling Britain with record-breaking winds and forcing millions to take shelter as it disrupted flights, trains and ferries across Western Europe.

London was eerily empty after the British capital was placed under its first ever “red” weather warning, meaning there was “danger to life”. By nightfall, police there said a woman in her 30s had died after a tree fell on a car she was a passenger in.

Meanwhile a man in his 50s was also killed in northwest England after debris struck the windscreen of a vehicle he was travelling in, according to Merseyside Police.

Beyond Britain, falling trees killed three people in the Netherlands and a man in his 60s in southeast Ireland, while a Canadian man aged 79 died in Belgium, according to officials in each country.

A motorist was killed when their car crashed into a tree that had fallen across a road near Adorp in the Netherlands’ northern province of Groningen.

Dozens of homes were evacuated in The Hague amid fears a church steeple could collapse. Footage showed the steeple wobbling and a large piece of debris falling on a car.

As well as in London, the highest weather alert level was declared across southern England, South Wales and the Netherlands, with many schools closed and rail travel paralyzed, as towering waves breached sea walls along the coasts.—AFP ■

Mysteries and music: listening in to underwater life

WHEN marine researchers started recording sounds in the seagrass meadows of the Mediterranean Sea they picked up a mysterious sound, like the croak of a frog, that resounded within the dense foliage – and nowhere else. “We recorded over 30 seagrasses and it was always there and no-one knew the species that was producing this kwa!

kwa! kwa!” said Lucia Di Iorio, a researcher in ecoacoustics at France’s CEFREM. “It took us three years to find out the species that was producing that sound.”

The melodious songs of whales might be familiar music of the world’s underwater habitats but few people will have heard the hoarse growl of a streaked gurnard or the rhythmic drumbeat of a red piranha. Scientists are now calling for those sounds and many thousands more to become more widely accessible.

They say a global database of the booms, whistles and chatter of the sea will help to monitor diversity in aquatic life – and help put a name to mystery sounds like the one Di Iorio and her colleagues investigated.—AFP ■

Chinese cities offer cash to combat people smuggling in Covid fight

SEVERAL southern Chinese cities are offering cash bounties worth tens of thousands of dollars for leads on smuggling rings that have brought coronavirus carriers from Hong Kong across the mainland border.

Beijing has adhered to a strict zero-Covid strategy that has kept infection numbers low by employing strict border closures, targeted lockdowns and long quarantines.

Arrivals from Hong Kong -- which is battling a serious flare-up in coronavirus cases -- normally undergo weeks of isolation.

But four people tested positive for Covid-19 on Monday after illegally entering mainland China from the city without quarantine, according to local authorities who announced cash rewards for clues on people smuggling.—AFP ■

Health authorities in Solomon Islands warn of more challenges as COVID-19 cases continue to surge

SOLOMON Islands Minister of Health and Medical Services Culwick Togamana warned on Thursday that people need to take extra care of themselves and their families as COVID-19 continues to overstretch the country's health services. Government data showed a total of 5,043 cases have been reported as of 16 Feb since community transmission began in January 2020, but health authorities believe that the figure is underreported due to the limited testing capacity. According to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies last week, Solomon Islands authorities said one in every two people had COVID-19 symptoms when testing was overwhelmed, indicating more possible infections with the virus. "COVID-19 is spreading faster than the wind from our cities and towns to the most remote communities. Testing and health services are overloaded, and this dangerous virus is running rampant in villages where people are yet to be given a first dose of the vaccine," said Solomon Islands Red Cross Society Secretary General Clement Manuri.—AFP ■

Japan to relax border controls, cut quarantine period from March: PM

JAPAN will ease COVID-19 border controls starting from March by raising the daily entry cap and reducing the quarantine period from seven days to three for both Japanese and foreign nationals, Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida said Thursday.

Japan will adjust its ban on new entrants from the current 3,500 to 5,000 per day starting next month. Foreign nationals will also be allowed to enter the country for purposes other than tourism.

The decision came as the country's entry ban on nonresident foreigners, imposed from late November to the end of February, has sparked strong criticism for being too strict and not based on science.

Upon arrival in Japan, travellers will be asked to quarantine for three days and the period will end after they test negative for COVID-19.

The easing of the entry curbs was approved after the head of an expert panel of the health ministry said Wednesday that the recent surge in COVID-19 cases has likely "peaked" in early February.

The country decided to impose border controls at the end of November in an effort to curb the highly transmissible Omicron variant of the coronavirus.

Only a fraction of nonresident foreigners wishing to enter Japan have received visas as exceptions. Students, businesspeople, academics and even lawmakers of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party have been strongly urging the Japanese government to ease the restrictions.—Xinhua ■

BioNTech to ship mobile Covid vaccine labs to Africa

GERMANY'S BioNTech, which together with Pfizer developed the first mRNA vaccine against the coronavirus, said Wednesday it plans to ship mobile vaccine production units to Africa.

"The question was, can we make the process compact enough to fit in a container," the chief executive and co-founder of BioNTech, Ugur Sahin, told AFP as the company unveiled the new labs, dubbed "BioNTainers".

BioNTech said it aims to establish the "first manufacturing facility in the African Union" in "mid-2022" and expects to ship the modular production units to Rwanda and/or Senegal.

Rwandan President Paul Kagame and his Senegalese counterpart Macky Sall attended the Vaccine Equity for Africa meeting at BioNTech's mRNA production site in Marburg, Germany, along with Ghana's President Nana Akufo-Addo and World Health Organization chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus.

"The modular system opens up new perspectives for global vaccine equity," Kagame said.

Tedros said that boosting local production was "essential", particularly as more than 100 countries worldwide had failed to attain the vaccination rate of 70 per cent that the WHO had been targeting for the middle of this year.

Africa is the least-vaccinated continent in the world — more than two years after the start of the pandemic and more than a year after the roll-out of the first coronavirus vaccines, less than 12 per cent of Africans have been fully vaccinated.

Earlier this month, South African biotech company Biologics announced it had produced the continent's first coronavirus vaccine based on mRNA technology using the genetic code that another mRNA vaccine maker, Moderna, had made publicly available.

Sahin said BioNTech, which developed its vaccine with US pharma giant Pfizer, has sold tens of millions of the shot and was aiming to "instal production sites for our mRNA technology on every continent".

G20 members agree to minimize impacts of Fed's raising interest rates

FINANCE leaders from the Group of 20 (G20) agreed on realizing a well calibrated, well planned, well communicated normalization in the monetary policy to minimize the impacts of the Fed's raising interest rates.

The consensus was made on Friday evening during the second day of the G20 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors (FMCBG) meeting in Jakarta, with Indonesia serving as the host country.

Bank Indonesia's Governor Perry Warjiyo told a press conference that developed countries should ensure that the normalization policy only posed minimum impacts to the global financial market and that it did not pose any spillover effect to developing countries.—Xinhua ■

Ukraine showdown casts shadow over Qatar gas summit

Global supply was tight because of high Asian demand for LNG and lower-than-normal Russia gas pipeline flows. PHOTO: AFP

LEADING gas producers meet in Qatar from Sunday to discuss how to answer frantic world demand, but Russian President Vladimir Putin is expected to stay away as Ukraine tensions soar, diplomats said.

The 11-member Gas Exporting Countries Forum holds its summit as the Ukraine showdown sends prices ever higher while Europe fears for its supplies from Russia.

The group that includes Russia, Qatar, Iran, Libya, Algeria and Nigeria -- accounting for more than 70 per cent of proven gas reserves -- has faced mounting pressure as Europe has sought alternative suppliers to Russia.

But most say they are already at or near maximum production and can only send short term relief supplies to Europe if existing customers agree.

Diplomats who took part in preparatory meetings said the group -- which excludes key producers Australia and the United States -- will discuss ways to increase production in the medium term. "But their hands are tied, there is next to no spare gas," said one, speaking on condition of anonymity.

After two days of ministerial meetings, Iran's President Ebrahim Raisi, who has rarely left his country since taking office, is to join Qatar's emir, Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani, for the main summit on Tuesday. India's gems, jewellery sector to achieve export target this year: gov't

A senior Indian official said Friday that the gems and jewellery sector is expected to achieve an export target of 40 billion US dollars this year.

Federal Minister for Commerce and Industry Piyush Goyal made the remarks while addressing the inaugural ceremony of India International Jewellery Show Signature 2022.

"The sector is expected to register a growth of 6.5 per cent over the pre-COVID-19 levels," Goyal said, noting that the gems and jewellery sector is a strong pillar of the Indian economy.

"Our gold and diamond trade contributes about 7 per cent to our GDP and employs over 50 lakh (5 million) persons," Goyal said.

Goyal encouraged the industry to aim to be a global champion by taking up bigger and bolder targets in domestic production as well as overseas sales.

According to the minister, about 850 exhibitors displayed products in over 1,450 booths during the exhibition, which drew over 14,000 pre-registered visitors.—Xinhua ■

Tunisians fear more economic pain as IMF talks loom

EVERY day at the family grocery stall in a Tunis market, Bilel Jani sees the reality of a biting economic crisis, which for many has overshadowed Tunisia's latest political turmoil.

"People here are poor," he said, handing a meagre bag of olives to a customer. "Most of our customers are living day-to-day. Monthly salaries these days don't even cover a week."

The small North African country, roiled by years of political turmoil that deepened with President Kais Saied's power grab last July, is also mired in a deep recession.

Surging prices and job losses have hurt families that were already struggling before the coronavirus pandemic.

This week, Tunisia started preliminary talks with the International Monetary Fund over a bailout package.

Such a deal would likely mean cuts to subsidies and public sector wages, which many fear would spell more suffering for the most vulnerable. That could fuel the same kind of grievances that sparked a revolution a decade ago and brought down autocrat Zine El Abidine Ben Ali after 23 years in power.—AFP ■

French state to pony up billions for EDF

FRANCE announced Friday a cash lifeline for state-owned energy giant EDF, which is buckling under massive debt just as it embarks on a new nuclear plant programme pushed by President Emmanuel Macron.

EDF's fortunes had already taken a hit after the government ordered it last month to cap electricity bills for French clients, even as prices have spiked on global markets.

The measure, which was enacted just weeks before Macron is expected to seek a second term in April, infuriated critics who accused him of electoral posturing that would cost the company some eight billion euros ($9.1 billion).

While EDF normally generates the bulk of its electricity from its network of 56 nuclear reactors across France, many are near the end of their 40-year lifespans and around a dozen have been shut or will be soon to carry out safety inspections over corrosion risks.

That will force the group to buy power on the European market, expected to cost it some 11 billion euros this year—even as its total debt load now stands at 43 billion euros. "EDF is experiencing problems linked to reactor outages, it's selling less nuclear power, and so it's revenues are down and it needs financial support from the state," Finance Minister Bruno Le Maire told RTL radio.

announced plans to build as many as 14 new next-generation EPR2 reactors to reduce the country's reliance on fossil fuels, which EDF has said could cost some 50 billion euros.—AFP ■

US existing home sales shot up 6.7% in January: report

EXISTING homes have become harder to find than ever, but Americans kept buying in January, pushing the pace of sales up much more than expected, according to industry data released Friday.

Existing homes sales jumped 6.7 per cent last month to a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of 6.5 million, even as the inventory of homes for sale hit a new all-time low, the National Association of Realtors (NAR) said.

The real estate market has boomed during the Covid-19 pandemic thanks in part to the Federal Reserve's easy money policies, causing property prices to climb and inventory to grow scarce. With the Fed next month set to hike interest rates for the first time since the crisis began to fight runaway inflation, of which home sales are a part, NAR Chief Economist Lawrence Yun said shoppers scrambled to get deals. "Buyers were likely anticipating further rate increases and locking-in at the low rates, and investors added to overall demand with all-cash offers," Yun said.—AFP ■

American Airlines cuts summer flights due to Boeing 787 delays

AMERICAN Airlines on Friday said it would cut more international flights over the summer than originally planned as it deals with delays in deliveries of the Boeing 787 Dreamliner long-haul jet.

The plane has been plagued by major production problems after initial manufacturing flaws were discovered in the summer of 2020, and deliveries have been suspended since last May.

Boeing is in negotiations with US aviation authorities, and unwilling to commit to a date to restart deliveries.

American Airlines was hoping to have 13 of the jets in its fleet by this year.

But in an internal notice seen by AFP, American said it was "taking a proactive approach to reduce the negative impact Boeing's delays could have on our business and our customers".

The airline will postpone the launch of its Dallas-Tel Aviv route as well as temporarily halt the Seattle-London, Dallas-Santiago de Chile, and Los Angeles-Sydney routes. It will reduce Miami-Sao Paulo service to once per day.

The company had previously cut its flight schedule in December, giving up certain destinations such as Edinburgh, Prague and Dubrovnik.— AFP ■

US Supreme Court to consider repealing Trump-era border policy

THE US Supreme Court agreed on Friday to consider whether President Joe Biden can end a controversial Trump-era border policy that denies asylum-seekers entry to the United States while their case is reviewed.

The Democratic president's administration in December asked the conservative-leaning high court to review decisions made by appeals courts that left in place the migration program implemented in 2019 by the previous government.

Under then-president Donald Trump's "Remain in Mexico" programme, tens of thousands of non-Mexican asylum seekers – mostly from Central America – were sent back over the border pending the outcome of their applications.

Since taking office in January 2021, Biden has pledged a more humane immigration policy and sought to dismantle the programme, officially called the Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP).

Those efforts have faced setbacks in the US court system, with an appeals court ruling in December that the programme should continue.

The Justice Department argued the programme "exposes migrants to unacceptable" risks and the previous court decisions were based on "erroneous interpretations" of the law, in its request to the Supreme Court to review the case.

The Supreme Court is expected to consider the case as early as April, according to court documents seen by AFP, while a decision is expected in the summer.—AFP ■

Hong Kong postpones new leader selection over virus outbreak

HONG KONG said on Friday it would postpone picking the city's new leader and was preparing to test the entire population for COVID-19 as it struggles to tackle a wave of infections.

The Chinese financial hub is currently in the throes of its worst-ever coronavirus outbreak, registering thousands of cases a day with hospitals reaching breaking point and a Beijing-mandated zero-COVID policy collapsing.

A small committee of Beijing loyalists had been set to choose the city's new chief executive in late March, with the nomination period for candidates beginning Sunday.

But current leader Carrie Lam on Friday announced the selection would now need to be pushed back to 8 May.

"The decision is due to Hong Kong facing the most severe situation since the pandemic began two years ago. It is a critical situation," she told reporters.

Lam confirmed authorities were moving to test all 7.5 million residents.

"One of the measures that we are planning - planning very seriously - is mandatory universal testing. So we will test everyone in Hong Kong," she said, although she once again ruled out a full city lockdown.

Mass testing has been used frequently on the Chinese mainland alongside strict lockdowns to quickly stamp out clusters.

But it is unclear what effect it will have in a city with so many daily infections and where a mainland style lockdown would be hard to pull off.

It is also not clear where Hong Kong would house and isolate so many positive cases once discovered.

Lam said the new measures were "in line with the spirit expressed by President Xi Jinping in his important instructions, namely that we must make controlling the epidemic our overriding priority".—AFP ■

Dubai ruler's daughter tells UN she is well, year after "hostage" videos

An Emirati princess who said last year that she had been held "hostage" in a palace assured UN rights chief Michelle Bachelet at a meeting in Paris that she was healthy, the high commissioner said on Friday.

The meeting, held on an unspecified date at the request of Dubai-based Latifa, took place a year after a video released by the British media in February 2021 spoke of the hostage-taking and the threat to his life.

"Latifa told the High Commissioner that she was fine and expressed her desire to respect her privacy," said Bachelet, the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, in a tweet, which included pictures of two women on a Paris street.—AFP ■

Sri Lanka clears police, defence chiefs over Easter bombings

Sri Lanka's High Court on Friday acquitted two top officials accused of "crimes against humanity" for failing to prevent the 2019 Easter Sunday bombings that killed 279 people.

The state had indicted the two men in November for failing to act on early warnings from an Indian intelligence agency that local jihadists were planning a string of suicide bombings in April 2019.

The three-judge panel dismissed all 855 charges against Hemasiri Fernando, then secretary to the ministry of defence, as well as then inspector general of police Pujith Jayasundara.

A court official said the judges in a unanimous decision exonerated the suspects and released them without calling defence witnesses. The attacks, blamed on a homegrown Islamic extremist group, targeted three churches and three hotels in the capital and killed 279 people, including 45 foreigners, leaving more than 500 wounded.—AFP ■

Eleven years since revolt, Libya far from democracy

LIBYANS on Thursday marked 11 years since the revolt that toppled dictator Muammar Ghaddafi, but the democracy many hoped for seems as elusive as ever, and many fear a return to conflict.

The anniversary comes as the country, for years plagued by divisions between east and west, finds itself with two rival prime ministers based in the capital Tripoli. Just weeks after national elections planned for 24 December were indefinitely postponed, the east-based parliament voted to appoint influential ex-interior minister Fathi Bashagha to replace the interim unity government. Incumbent Prime Minister Abdulhamid Dbeibah, appointed as part of a United Nations-driven peace process, has insisted he will only hand over power to an elected government.

The resulting showdown has sparked fears of another conflict – not between east and west, but within Tripoli itself.

Russian parliament's call for east Ukraine independence sparks alarm

POSSIBLE Russian recognition of separatist "republics" independent from Kyiv is threatening to derail an already fragile peace process, as fears grow of large-scale conflict in eastern Ukraine.

Tensions between the West and Russia over Ukraine have soared in recent months, after Moscow massed tens of thousands of troops near its neighbour's border.

Western leaders say Russia could launch an attack on Ukraine at any moment, though Moscow has denied such plans.

But an appeal by Russia's parliament to President Vladimir Putin to recognize the independence of the self-proclaimed "republics" of Donetsk and Lugansk in Ukraine's industrial east has raised alarm.

Kyiv has been battling pro-Russia separatists in its eastern regions since 2014 in a conflict that has claimed around 14,000 lives.

Fighting has largely diminished since the 2014 and 2015 Minsk accords, under which Russia and Ukraine agreed to a ceasefire and a roadmap to a political settlement.

But that process has hit a wall, with each side accusing the other of not fulfilling its end of the deal. Ukraine's foreign ministry told AFP that a Moscow recognition of the republics would make Russia "totally responsible for destroying the Minsk accords".—AFP ■

Munich Security Conference opens focusing on 'unlearning helplessness'

THE 58th edition of the Munich Security Conference (MSC) opened here on Friday afternoon with a theme focusing on "unlearning helplessness" against the backdrop of tensions in the Ukraine crisis, reported Xinhua.

There is a mounting feeling of "helplessness" in many societies across the world in the face of a growing number of crises and conflicts, according to a security report published ahead of the conference. "The feeling of helplessness is becoming a kind of self-fulfilling prophecy, which leads to give up, even though we have all the tools and resources to address such challenges as the pandemic, climate change or great power confrontations," said Wolfgang Ischinger, chairman of the MSC, in his opening speech.

Man-made problems can be solved by man, Ischinger said, calling on everyone to collectively unlearn and overcome helplessness. Participants in the high-profile conference are also scheduled to discuss the ongoing tension around Ukraine. While Russia says it is withdrawing some of its troops from the Ukrainian border, US President Joe Biden says his government has "not yet verified that". — Xinhua ■

War fears mount as Putin to oversee drills, Zelensky to meet allies

RUSSIA'S leader will oversee major military drills along Ukraine's borders on Saturday, further escalating tensions after Washington said Moscow would invade within days, and Ukraine's president headed to Europe to drum up support.

Artillery shelling in the east of Ukraine and orders from Russian-backed separatists for civilians to evacuate the region on Friday inflamed an already febrile situation as Washington insisted Moscow was encircling its pro-Western neighbour.

The Kremlin continues to say it has no plans to attack.

US President Joe Biden said that the invasion would come in the next week or days and that his Russian counterpart President Vladimir Putin had "made the decision" to invade. But Biden left the door open for a diplomatic resolution. — AFP ■

Clashes at international far-right meeting in Bogota

POLICE clashed Friday with masked and hooded anti-fascism protesters who threw stones and broke windows at a hotel hosting a meeting of far-right political groups from Spain and Latin America.

The meeting of representatives of Spain's Vox party and far-right groups from Colombia, Peru, Cuba, Venezuela and Chile, attracted about 100 left-wing protesters with anti-fascist banners.

They threw stones and trash cans at the hotel hosting the so-called "Madrid Forum", hitting the shields of riot police posted outside, and breaking windows.

Police responded with stun grenades, arresting several protesters. "They are the Nazis," shouted a young man in the crowd, referring to those attending the meeting.

Vox member Victor Gonzalez, a Spanish MP, told AFP the protesters were supporters of a "new communism". —AFP ■

France told to withdraw troops from Mali without delay

THE Malian government has called on France to immediately withdraw the Barkhane and Takuba forces from the national territory under the supervision of the Malian authorities, said a statement issued Friday by Abdoulaye Maiga, the spokesperson for the Malian government.

This decision was taken by Bamako, in view of the "repeated breaches of the defence agreement" between Mali and France, said Maiga in the statement. Maiga is also the Malian Minister of Territorial Administration and Decentralization.

According to the statement, the Malian government insisted that it had taken note of the "unilateral decision of 17 February 2022" of the French authorities to withdraw the military forces Barkhane and Takuba in "violation of the agreements" binding France and Mali as well as involving "other partners".—Xinhua ■

Sweden's curlers deny Britain a first Beijing Winter Olympics gold

BRITAIN were denied their first gold medal of the Beijing Winter Olympics when their men's curling team were pipped 5-4 by Sweden in the final on Saturday.

The disappointed British team at least had the consolation of winning Britain's first medal of the Games and a tweet of congratulations from the royal family saying "you should be incredibly proud of your performance this week".

Swedish skip Niklas Edin has finished fourth and won bronze and silver medals in previous Games, so he was overjoyed to finally call himself an Olympic champion.

"God, it's nice. It's obviously been an incredibly long journey with pretty disappointing defeats in a couple of the previous Games," the 36-year-old said.

"It feels so crazy, I almost had to ask someone before I came here, 'We have won, right?'"

British skipper Bruce Mouat told the BBC: "It's still pretty raw. That's going to the case for quite a while." Team GB have one more chance to win an elusive gold with the British women's quartet, skippered by Eve Muirhead.

Porteous wins chaotic, wind-battered final for second N.Zealand gold FREESTYLE skier Nico Porteous survived treacherous winds, bone-chilling temperatures and a nasty fall to win New Zealand's second gold medal in Winter Olympic history on Saturday in Beijing.

The 20-year-old came out on top in a wild halfpipe final battered by high winds and he took a tumble on his final run that left him bleeding from his ear and nursing a sore shoulder.

But he had already done enough to win thanks to his first-run score of 93.00 and he was given a congratulatory haka by his New Zealand team-mates, having ended American David Wise's eight-year run as champion.

Snowboarder Zoi Sadowski Synnott gave New Zealand their first ever Winter Olympics gold the previous week and Porteous said it was "almost scary and really motivating" to watch her make history.

"To have Zoi do that was so inspirational, so driving for me," said Porteous, who won bronze in the event four years ago at the Pyeongchang Games.

"It made me put my head down and do everything I could for this moment."

The competition featured several high-impact wipe-outs in the tricky conditions, including one on the last run for American Aaron Blunck that delayed Porteous's celebrations.

Wise, who finished second on 90.75, said the weather "defined the competition", realizing beforehand that it "might be the kind of day where a stock run could be on the podium".

Porteous's title-winning first run was anything but ordinary, but he acknowledged that he needed "a little bit of luck" to claim the gold.

"It's a constant uphill battle to keep your legs warm and keep your body warm because there's nothing worse than dropping into a run with cold muscles and not feeling sharp," said Porteous.

"In our sport, especially on a day like today, it's anyone's game."

American Alex Ferreira finished third on 86.75, putting all three medal winners from the 2018 Pyeongchang Games back on the podium but in different order.—AFP ■

Djokovic faces Italian teenager Musetti in Dubai comeback

NOVAK Djokovic faces Italian teenager Lorenzo Musetti in Dubai next week in a tough first round comeback following the drama surrounding his Australian Open deportation.

The world number one makes his return to the court on Monday after the coronavirus vaccine row that kept him from defending his Australian Open title.

Djokovic and wild card Musetti have history, with the 19-year-old taking the first two sets off the Serb when they met in last year's French Open.

Musetti eventually retired due to injury with Djokovic leading the last 16 clash 6-7 (7/9), 6-7 (2/7), 6-1, 6-0, 4-0.

Djokovic went on to seal the title at Roland Garros for his 19th Grand Slam, with his 20th secured at Wimbledon the following month. The 34-year-old has kept a low profile since his deportation from Australia last month over his refusal to get jabbed.—AFP ■
