To foster the multiparty democracy expected by the people

Free and fair elections are fundamental to strengthen the democratic system. In my 2020 New Year Message to the country, I said that ‘the Year 2020 is an important year for the country. It is important to strengthen the multiparty democracy system this year with the holding of the general elections. For ensuring free and fair elections and for prioritizing the national interest sincerely in the politics, I said during the 3rd anniversary of Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement on 15 October 2018 that ‘Nothing is as important as the ethnic affairs and the national interests, and only the politics with sincerity and fairness’.

During the 4th meeting of Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong, held on 20 August 2020, I also said that the concept ‘no one is above the law’ in establishing the democratic system as a fundamental rule in laying the democratic foundation, and ‘no one or no organization is above the national interest in state-building and nation-building’. These concepts of the Tatmadaw are aimed to foster the multiparty democracy expected by the people.

One of the police who is currently under the medical treatment of ICU of Pyin Oo Lwin military hospital is unlikely to survive a wound to the head.

The military medics make best efforts not to lose a loyal civil service person.

Pansodan-Dala ferries run from 5:30 am to 7 pm

PANSODAN-DALA ferries are running from 5:30 am to 7 pm beginning from 9 February because of the dropping number of commuters and declaration of a curfew from 8 pm until 4 am, according to the Delta Division of Inland Water Transport (IWT).

Three “Cherry” ferries provide their transport services with 46 routes between Pansodan and Dala jetties for the residents’ convenience from Dala, Twantay, Kawhmu, Kungyangon townships and some townships.

The Pansodan-Dala jetty is the only gateway for the local people in southern Yangon to link themselves with the commercial hub of Yangon City.

“Today, we started our new schedules of water ferries from 5:30 am to 6:40 pm. We will start to ride from Pansodan from 6 pm to 7 pm. Earlier, we operated the water ferries for 38 runs. Now, we will run only 35 routes because the government declared the curfew. That is the reason why we have reduced the water ferry routes. However, we are running the ferries with a new schedule for the safety and convenience of passengers,” said U Hla Win Naing, assistant general manager with the Delta Division of Inland Water Transport (IWT).

The number of commuters aboard the Pansodan-Dala water ferries is sharply dropping. Black bean price rises by over K50,000 per tonne on USD appreciation

THE PRICE of black beans in the domestic market has risen by over K50,000 per tonne because of the appreciation of the US dollar exchange rate, according to the Yangon Region Chamber of Commerce and Industry (Bayintnaung commodity depot).

Although the dollar exchange rate stood around K1,330 per dollar in the local currency market at the end of January, the rate jumped to K1,400 per dollar on 4 February.

Therefore, the black beans’ price has amounted to K2,075,000 per tonne on 10 February, increasing from just K2,023,000 per tonne on 3 February, increasing over K30,000 per tonne. Similarly, the price of the pigeon pea is also about K310,000 per tonne.

The new harvested black bean is currently entering the domestic market. The traders demand it from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh.

The first October of 2020 saw the Ministry of Commerce and Industry of India issue a notification to purchase 150,000 tonnes of black beans. The import deadline is March 2021.

Since 2017, India has been setting import quota on beans, including black beans and pigeon peas. Myanmar has to export black beans and pigeon peas under a quota system and limit period. Consequently, according to market observers, there is no guarantee that we could get the prevailing market price next year.

Following no assurance of black beans and pigeon peas in the market, the association suggested on the end-October that the local farmers grow the black-eyed beans more.—NN/ GNLMS

Strict rules for Lunar New Year in Singapore amid pandemic

THE ANNUAL Lunar New Year celebrations will be more muted in Singapore this year as many restrictions to curb the spread of novel coronavirus remain in place, with roving lion dance troupes that are in high demand during the festivities badly hit.

Despite being able to contain the COVID-19 pandemic and having entered Phase 3 in reopening the economy after a semi-lockdown most of last year; many restrictions on social gatherings are continue to be imposed in the wealthy city-state.

People are still required to wear masks in public places, and the government is ramping up vaccinations and testing for the coronavirus all over the island.

The government is encouraging people to meet virtually in celebrating the Lunar New Year, which falls on Friday, so as to minimize social gatherings.

Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong appealed to Singaporeans in a Facebook post on Monday to limit their house visits during the festival to family members only.

Ethnic Chinese account for 74 per cent of Singapore’s total population of 5.69 million.

The number of visitors that every house can receive per day is currently capped at eight, and people are not allowed to visit more than two houses per day, which is expected to affect the tradition of having reunion dinners on the eve and the tradition of house visits.

Restaurants cannot have more than eight diners occupying a table and intermingling between tables is forbidden, with restaurants ordered by the authorities to make sure that large groups of people from different households do not gather at the same restaurant, occupying more than one table and mingling with each other.—Kyodo

S.Africa goes for Johnson & Johnson vaccine: minister

SOUTH AFRICA will begin its coronavirus inoculation campaign with Johnson & Johnson vaccines, the health minister said on Wednesday, after withholding the Oxford/AstraZeneca formula over doubts about effectiveness.

The country worst-hit by the pandemic in Africa has suspended its vaccine rollout – meant to begin with Oxford/AstraZeneca this week – after scientists found the shot failed to prevent mild and moderate illness caused by a local virus variant known as 501Y.V2.

“Given the outcomes of the efficacy studies... (government) will continue with the planned phase one vaccination using the Johnson & Johnson vaccine instead of the AstraZeneca vaccine,” Health Minister Zweli Mkhize told a press briefing.

“The Johnson & Johnson vaccine has been proven effective against the 501Y.V2 variant.”

He did not say when immunization would begin.

To date South Africa has ordered nine million doses of the Johnson & Johnson vaccines, of which a small shipment is expected to arrive next week.

However, the first consignment will probably be used as “research stock”, Mkhize said.

South African pharmaceutical giant Aspen, a contracted Johnson & Johnson vaccine manufacturer, is striving to produce its first doses next month.

“They are very determined to fast-track this production in South Africa,” Mkhize said, adding that the stock would then be available in April.

South Africa’s vaccination delay has set back an ambitious aim to inoculate around 40 million people – 67 per cent of the population – by the end of 2021.

The country was slow to catch on to the global vaccine scramble and only received its first jabs on February 1.—AFP

Thyssenkrupp sees ‘signs of recovery’ after virus hit

TROUBLED German industrial giant Thyssenkrupp said Wednesday it narrowed losses in the first quarter, buoyed by a “recovery” in demand for steel and car parts after the initial hit from the pandemic.

The Essen-based group, which is in the throes of a painful restructuring, posted a net loss of 141 million euros ($171 million) between October and December, compared with a 449 million euro loss over the same period a year earlier.

The group made an adjusted operating profit of 78 million euros, reversing a loss of 185 million euro in its first quarter a year ago.

“We’re noticing signs of an economic recovery and our measures are starting to bear fruit. But we’re not out of the woods yet,” CEO Martina Merz said in a statement.

The long-struggling conglomerate, which employs around 100,000 people, last year sold off its lucrative elevator business to fund a turnaround plan that will include 11,000 job cuts.

The coronavirus outbreak compounded Thyssenkrupp’s woes, pushing it deep into the red in its 2019/2020 fiscal year as lockdown measures closed dealerships and disrupted production at factories around the world.

But the group said economic activity picked up in the final stretch of 2020 and it saw strong demand for car parts and industrial components used in wind energy, particularly in China and Germany.—AFP

Facebook ramps up effort to curb vaccine hoaxes

FACEBOOK on Monday said it is ramping up efforts to stem the spread of misinformation about COVID-19 vaccines, spread facts, and figure out who might be wary of getting the jab.

The move includes banning groups that repeatedly spread misinformation and debunked claims about the virus and vaccines in general.

The leading social network was updated with the help of the World Health Organization (WHO).

The list of barred misinformation included claims COVID-19 was created by people or caused by vaccines, or that it is safer to get the virus than the vaccine.

It also included false claims that vaccines are toxic or cause autism.

Critics of the social media giant’s handling of misinformation were not convinced by its latest move.

“Facebook has been promising to crack down on COVID and anti-vax misinformation for the past year,” the nonprofit Centre for Countering Digital Hate said in a message fired off on Twitter.—AFP
COVID-19 ‘extremely unlikely to have come from a lab, experts say

The World Health Organization’s (WHO) mission to China was unable to find the origin of the coronavirus, according to its final report, released on Monday. The mission found that the virus was likely transmitted from bats to humans, with a possible intermediary host. However, it also noted that there is a “real possibility” that the virus could have been transmitted to humans from a laboratory. The mission concluded that the virus is “likely to have emerged naturally in China.”

The conclusions of the WHO mission were met with skepticism from some scientists, who argue that the virus was engineered in a lab. Dr. Peter Ben Embarek, who led the WHO mission to China, acknowledged the possibility of a lab leak but said there was no evidence to support it.

The WHO mission’s report was met with skepticism from some scientists, who argue that the virus was engineered in a lab. Dr. Peter Ben Embarek, who led the WHO mission to China, acknowledged the possibility of a lab leak but said there was no evidence to support it.

Five questions still unanswered

1. How did the virus originate?
2. Is it natural or the result of a lab leak?
3. Where did the virus first emerge?
4. How did the virus spread from China to other countries?
5. Were there any intermediate hosts?

THE VIRUS that causes COV-19 is highly transmissible and can cause serious illness in some people. It is transmitted primarily through respiratory droplets generated by coughing or sneezing, and can spread from person to person through close contact. The virus may also be spread through other means, such as by contact with contaminated surfaces.

Now, the time comes to consider that major water pollution sources in Myanmar are wastes from industries, agriculture and mining. The chemical wastes from illegal gold mining in rivers and ponds, and from industries have polluted our rivers and water sources since decades ago with development of industries and mining.

Heavy metals, which contain many toxic compounds that damage the health aquatic animals and those who eat them, from industrial process can accumulate in nearby lakes and rivers.

Heavy metal pollution is very harmful to humans, animals and water. It is a must that efforts are made to prevent water pollution. Therefore, we need a systematic approach to prevent water pollution.

The world is facing the challenge of water pollution. Heavy metal pollution is the most severe problem in the world. It is a must that we work on this issue to prevent water pollution.

Don’t let Long Covid ‘fall through the cracks’, WHO warns

Europe’s race to manufacture Covid-19 vaccines must accelerate to catch up to scientific breakthroughs and outpace emerging variants, European Commission chief Ursula von der Leyen said on Wednesday.

“We underestimated the difficulty related to mass production. Normally, it takes five to 10 years to produce a new vaccine. We did it in 10 months. This is a huge scientific success, and we should be rightly proud — but in a way, science has outstripped industry,” she told the European Parliament. In her first public admission of post-Covid conditions, von der Leyen said, “Long Covid should not fall through the cracks”.

She said the impact of Long Covid on society and the economy was starting to become clear, and for those reasons, “people start to listen” beyond the medical community. Though the level of research is growing, it is “still not enough”, he said.

British doctor Gail Carson, from the International Severe Acute Respiratory and Emerging Infection Consortium, warned that “Long Covid could become the pandemic on the pandemic.”

Vaccine production must catch up to science

Europe’s race to manufacture Covid-19 vaccines must accelerate to catch up to scientific breakthroughs and outpace emerging variants, European Commission chief Ursula von der Leyen said on Wednesday.

“We’re dealing with completely new mRNA vaccines never manufactured at scale before. One of the current bottlenecks is, for example, linked to synthetic molecules... we need more coordination on the supply of key ingredients.”

Von der Leyen warned that European scientists do not yet know if the vaccines will be effective against new mutant strains of the virus that are emerging. “But we do know these variants will continue to emerge. And we do know that we need to anticipate and prepare immediately,” she warned.—AFP

Covid-safe Valentine’s Day dining

It's a Covid-era conundrum for Valentine’s Day: how to eat out with your beloved when you live in a country where all restaurants are closed?

The answer hit upon by a handful of hotels in Belgium's capital is to convert empty rooms into private dining salons for two, where a four-course meal with champagne and wine can be enjoyed without breaking the household “bubble”.

“We’re over the moon about being here tonight, just like in a restaurant,” said Marine Deroe, a 34-year-old Frenchwoman living in Brussels who was trying out the concept just ahead of Valentine’s Day.

“We’ve been cooped up at home for months. We’ve tried setting up pretend ‘evenings out’ at home — but to actually go out, like to a restaurant, it’s a super opportunity that we just jumped on,” she said.

And her boyfriend had just been greeted and shown to a candle-lit table set up were a bed used to be, as music travelled into their room in the Qbic Hotel, which says it pioneered the idea.

A waitress hovered to take their choices from the menu, including a bottle of wine, which had to be ordered before a government coronavirus ban on serving alcohol past 8:00 pm kicked in.

It’s not just room service, the hotel manager, Bert Vandewaetere pointed out. The 149-euro ($180) package covers a hotel room to sleep in, a separate room to dine in, the dinner — not including any drinks — and breakfast.

“Basically, people dress themselves up for a really good night on a Saturday evening — children at home, only couples are coming here, just two people,” he said.

Finally we can go out

He said he came up with the idea after Belgium closed restaurants and bars in November to slow the spread of the coronavirus, aggravating an already steep drop in hotel business because of cancelled trade fairs and other events.

It was especially important that the Qbic prove itself, as it had opened in late 2019 just before the pandemic hit.—AFP
Russia’s virus caseload passes four million

Russia officially surpassed four million coronavirus infections Wednesday, days after the country dramatically revised upwards its fatality rate, cementing its place as one of the world’s worst-hit nations.

A government tally showed infections had reached 4,012,710, which is the fourth-highest rate globally after the United States, India and Brazil.

But Russia has come under fire for its official virus statistics and the government’s stated death toll of 78,134 in particular has been undermined by recent mortality data.

Figures published by a government agency Rosstat on Monday showed more than 162,000 virus-related deaths last year, more than double the number reported by the government’s task force so far.

Russia has frequently come under fire for downplaying the impact of the pandemic and only counting fatalities where coronavirus was found to be the primary cause of death after an autopsy.

The country had been battered recently by a second wave of infections but has held back on reimposing lockdowns like other European countries and instead relied on a nationwide vaccine rollout.

Russia said Wednesday that 2.2 million people in the country had been administered the jab since vaccinations began in January.

The mayor of Moscow Sergei Sobyanin said last month that half of the city’s population, or at least six million people, had been infected with the virus, suggesting a much higher nationwide total.

Still, last month he also announced a significant easing of restrictions in the capital, which is the epicentre of the virus outbreak in Russia.— AFP

Japan to start Covid-19 vaccines despite syringe shortage

JAPAN will start coronavirus vaccinations next week, its prime minister said Wednesday, but it is scrambling to secure suitable syringes so doses won’t go to waste.

The country has reached deals with three major drug firms to buy enough vaccine doses for its population of 126 million.

But it has not yet announced a detailed roll-out plan for the jabs, less than six months before the pandemic-postponed Olympics begin.

The Pfizer/BioNTech vaccine is likely to become the first jab approved for use in Japan in the coming days, following domestic clinical trials required by the country’s health authorities.

“When we have confirmed the vaccine’s efficacy and safety, we will start vaccination by the middle of next week,” Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga said.

Japan is trying to secure enough special syringes that can extract the full six doses from each vial of Pfizer vaccine.

More commonly used syringes can only draw five doses — meaning the last one needs to be discarded.

The syringe problem could force the country to forgo enough Pfizer vaccine doses for up to 12 million people, local media estimated.

“At first, we will use the syringes that can draw six doses, but as we vaccinate many people, these will become scarce,” Health Minister Norihisa Tamura said on Tuesday.

“We are working hard to secure the syringes. We are asking medical equipment manufacturers to increase their production,” he told parliament.—AFP

BioNTech starts Covid-19 vaccine production at new German site

German Covid-19 vaccine maker BioNTech said Wednesday it has started production at its new facility in Marburg, expected to significantly boost the EU’s vaccine supply.

The company said it has partnered with Germany’s IDT Biologika to produce more Covid-19 vaccines for Europe.

The two companies are “exploring options” to accelerate output of the completed AstraZeneca vaccine in the second quarter of 2021, AstraZeneca said in a statement.

The agreement will see both companies invest to increase capacity at a production site in Germany to produce millions of doses per month by the end of 2022.— AFP

Democrats lay out case in Trump impeachment trial

DEMOCRATS present the case against Donald Trump in his Senate impeachment trial Wednesday, arguing that he directed an enraged crowd to storm Congress in the dying days of his presidency — even if Republicans look unlikely to convict.

Unlike Trump’s first impeachment trial a year ago, which took three weeks, this one is expected to last just days, with lawmakers on both sides keen to move on.

After a large majority of Republicans voted Tuesday that they consider putting a former president on trial to be unconstitutional, it would take a major surprise for Democrats to obtain the two-thirds majority in the Senate requires for conviction.

But even if Trump looks set for acquittal in the 50-50 Senate, as he was last year, Democrats are presenting a searing case against the populist real estate tycoon, who is holed up in his luxury Florida club.

Impeachment managers, the equivalent of prosecutors in a regular trial, are expected to take no more than two days to lay out their contention that Trump incited an insurrection when he tried to overturn his November election loss to Joe Biden with a sustained campaign of lies about voter fraud.

On Tuesday they gave a preview, playing a 13-minute compilation of video clips showing Trump stirring up a crowd of supporters on January 6 before a mob rampaged through the halls of Congress, seeking to stop certification of Biden’s victory.

“If that’s not an impeachable offence, then there is no such thing,” lead impeachment manager Jamie Raskin said in a speech that riveted watching senators. — AFP

Briton convicted in Bali cop killing to be freed from prison

A Briton jailed for beating an Indonesian policeman to death in Bali with his Australian girlfriend was to be freed Thursday after four years in prison, authorities said. David Taylor is expected to be deported back to the United Kingdom after leaving Kerobokan prison on the Indonesian holiday island, an official told AFP Wednesday.

“He’ll be released tomorrow” said Bali’s justice department spokesman, I Putu Surya Dharma.

Taylor and his former girlfriend, Sara Connor, who was released from prison last year, were convicted in 2017 of fatally assaulting officer Wayan Sudarsa, whose battered body was found in the popular tourist area of Kuta the previous year. — AFP

French mulls introducing consent age as sex abuse claims pile up

The French government has backed the introduction of a minimum age of sexual consent, a move that would bring it in line with most other Western countries, following years of campaigning by abuse victims.

The push for a change in the law has been given extra impetus by allegations brought by a woman claiming she was raped by more than 20 firefighters when she was a teenager, with a ruling that it had intercepted two “booty trails” drones in the south. — AFP

Italian police seize 1.3 tonnes of cocaine in major mafia drug bust

ITALIAN police said Wednesday they had seized 1.3 tonnes of cocaine in the past week from the southern port of Gioia Tauro, a major narcotics entry-point controlled by the ‘Ndrangheta mafia.

In three operations using sophisticated scanners, police discovered the uncut drugs worth €260 million hidden within containers loaded with coffee and frozen meat from Brazil, and exotic fruit from Ecuador.

“The seized drugs, of the purest quality, could have been cut up to four times by drug traffickers before being put on the market, earning €260 million for the ‘Ndrangheta,” the provincial police force said in a statement.

The ‘Ndrangheta, which is based in the southern region of Calabria but whose tentacles reach internationally, is now considered Italy’s most powerful organized crime group by anti-mafia prosecutors. — AFP

Huthi drone attack on Saudi airport leaves plane ablaze

A DRONE strike launched by Yemen’s Iran-backed Huthis on Wednesday left a civilian plane ablaze at a Saudi airport, days after the US moved to delist the rebels as terrorists.

Saudi authorities did not immediately report any casualties from the attack, claimed by the Huthis, the latest in a series of rebel assaults on the kingdom despite a renewed American push to de-escalate Yemen’s six-year conflict.

Pictures released by state media showed a blackened gash on the side of a passenger jet after the attack, which occurred on the same day the new US special envoy for Yemen Tim Lenderking met Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Faisal bin Farhan in Riyadh for talks.

“A cowardly criminal terrorist attack launched against Abha International Airport in Saudi Arabia by the Huthi militia,” state-run Al-Ekhbariya television quoted the Riyadh-led military coalition battling the rebels as saying.

“A fire that engulfed a passenger plane due to the Huthi attack on Abha Airport is under control,” it added.

The coalition did not say how the attack was carried out, but earlier in the day reported that it had intercepted two “booty trails” drones in the south.

The Shi’ite Huthis, who control much of northern Yemen, said they had struck Abha airport with four drones.

Yahya Sarie, spokesman for the Huthis’ armed wing, claimed the airport was used to launch attacks on Yemen. — AFP

THE GLOBAL NEW LIGHT OF MYANMAR

Justice Minister Eric Dupond-Moretti said on Tuesday that the government was “favourable a new crime be established, whereby any act of sexual penetration by an adult involving a minor aged 15 is a crime”.

His proposal goes further than a bill drafted by members of the Senate, which calls for the age of consent to be set at 13. Speaking to France 2 television the minister said public opinion had shifted on the issue of sex between adults and minors, long shrugged off in France as harmless in cases where the relations were presented as consensual. — AFP

Turbine giant Vestas looking offshore after strong 2020 results

Vestas, the global leader in wind turbines, posted stronger annual results Wednesday and said it was looking to expand crucial offshore operations with a giant new model.

The Danish company reported a 10 per cent rise in net profit to 771 million euros ($933 million) for 2020, even though its supply chain had been affected by the coronavirus pandemic.

Sales jumped 22 per cent to a record 14.82 billion euros, a statement said.

One disappointing number was for orders however, which declined by eight percent to 12.7 billion euros in a sector where competition is stiff and global investment is growing.

Vestas has long been a leader in onshore turbines and must now catch up with offshore rivals such as the German/Spanish group Siemens Gamesa or the US multinational General Electric (GE).

To lead the expansion of wind energy into the becoming dominant energy source, it is crucial for Vestas to become a leader in offshore wind,” the statement quoted president and chief executive Henrik Andersen as saying. —AFP

Dutch brewing giant Heineken said on Wednesday it would cut around 8,000 jobs worldwide as the coronavirus pandemic kept much of the hospitality sector closed.

Heineken, the world’s number two brewer, said it recorded a net loss of €204 million in 2020, a 109 per cent fall in profits from the year before.

Heineken CEO Dolf van den Brink said it had been “a year of unprecedented disruption and transition” for the company.

“The COVID-19 pandemic and governments’ measures continue to have a material impact on our markets and business,” Heineken said in a statement.

Sales fell by 17 per cent to €23 billion with bars and cafes closed in many countries, the company said.

Less than 30 per cent of outlets were operating in Europe in particular at the end of January, it said.

Heineken had announced in October that restructuring was needed to reduce personnel costs but gave no figure for layoffs at the time.

“The overall restructuring programme will reduce our employee base by circa 8,000 people,” Wednesday’s statement said.

This included cutting jobs at the head office in Amsterdam, while other layoffs would depend on local circumstances, it added.

China factory prices see first rise in a year

FACTORY prices rose in China for the first time in a year last month as the country’s vast industrial sector leads a recovery from the virus pandemic, with analysts hailing the data as a turning point for the world’s number two economy.

But the lingering effects of the disease weighed on the country’s vast army of shoppers as consumer prices slipped, hit by new outbreaks that led to the reimposition of containment measures.

Official data showed the producer price index (PPI), a key measure of input costs, came in at 0.3 per cent in January, having as a measure of input costs, came in at 0.4 per cent fall seen in December.

“We believe that the turn of PPI is very solid, from a deflation trend to an inflation trend,” said ING chief economist for Greater China Iris Pang. “Although this is mild, it is a turn, a very important turn, and it will last for the rest of 2021.”

The reading comes as China leads a recovery in the world economy, with the rollout of vaccines and slowing infection rates fuelling hopes that lockdowns and other containment measures can be eased, setting up a huge bounce this year.

However, the consumer price index edged down a worse-than-expected 0.3 per cent as a spike in infections that led to new tough restrictions in the north of the country combined with a high base from January last year.

Virus threatens ‘game over’ for Japan’s arcades

EVENINGS are normally the busiest time at Mikado, a retro gaming arcade in Tokyo, but these days the shutters come down early, leaving “Street Fighter” fans out in the cold. Bright, noisy arcades are still a neighbourhood fixture in Japan, but they have been disappearing as business is hit by virus-curtailed opening hours.

“This is when the place usually starts to fill up,” laments Yasushi Fukamachi, a manager at Mikado, whose 250 vintage machines attract nocturnal students and office workers who have just clocked off.

It is approaching 8 pm and a few dozen gamblers wearing face masks are fighting it out on joystick classics, eking out their final minutes of fun before being shoed out.

Since early January, Tokyo and other parts of Japan have been under a state of emergency to bring down surging virus cases. Businesses are told to close early, with possible fines for those that refuse.

But unlike bars and restaurants, arcades like Mikado do not receive government cash as compensation for lost income.

Several arcades went bust following Japan’s first state of emergency last year, which saw most of them close completely for two months, and those that survived are now struggling.— AFP

Companies hope for post-pandemic profits from ‘digital nomads’

COMPANIES around the world are betting that spiking interest in working from abroad during the pandemic will prove the foundation for a profitable new sector that can thrive in the years ahead.

“Covid has sped things up, what used to be a niche has become the norm,” says Emmanuel Guisset, whose firm Outsite rents slots in shared living and working spaces to so-called “digital nomads” from Portugal to Hawaii. He calls the pandemic a “springboard” for his business, one in a whole web of companies offering highly-mobile online workers everything from cow-working spaces to Instagrammable villas and training to ease them into their new way of life.

Although it had to close its properties in the first months of the coronavirus outbreak, Outsite enjoyed a 30 per cent increase in reservations compared with 2019 and masses of new users. “When things are back to normal, it’s going to explode,” Guisset predicts.

Crucially, employers are increasingly open to the idea, with around 20 companies contacting Guisset to arrange paid-for stays for their workers — “a way of hanging on to talented employees,” he says. “The million dollar question” for the budding sector is whether such openness at workplaces will outlive pandemic restrictions, says Professor Maurie Cohen of the New Jersey Institute of Technology.— AFP

As Trump trial opens, evidence mounts Capitol attack was planned

ON DECEMBER 19, Beverly Hills salon owner Gina Bisignano read a tweet from president Donald Trump: “Big protest in D.C. on January 6th. Be there, and please tell your friends and family.”

“We’ll be there,” replied Bisignano, one of tens of millions who said the summons to Washington to battle Trump’s election defeat

Meanwhile Ethan Nordean in Washington state and Enrique Tarrio in Florida were online making their January 6 plans as leaders of the extreme-right Proud Boys.

Nordean, according to a court filing, on December 27 appealed to followers for funds to buy protective gear and communications equipment.

A week later he and Tarrio told followers in a podcast to wear black, and said they would have to be prepared to fight.

“We are looked at almost like soldiers of the right wing,” said Tarrio. “This stuff is real. We are in a war.”

In the ranks of the extremist Proud Boys or Oath Keepers, among QAnon conspiracists and hardcore fans of the Republican president, the message was clear weeks ahead: Trump wants you to head to Washington to stop Congress from certifying Joe Biden’s election win on January 6.

As Trump stands trial in the US Senate for incitement of insurrection, increasing evidence in court filings shows the attack on the US Capitol was premeditated.

Oil-rich Libya in poverty after decade of conflict

LIBYA has Africa’s largest proven oil reserves and only seven million people, but a decade of bloody conflict has left its economy shattered and its population mired in poverty.

The dinar has crashed and consumer prices have surged, among the world’s poorest nations.

In Tripoli, defunct cranes tower precariously above the rusty steel and concrete skeletons of half-finished buildings in deserted, overgrown construction sites.

They are sad reminders of the relative prosperity and economic stability under dictator Moamer Kadafi, whose 42-year grip on power ended with the Arab Spring uprising 10 years ago.

In recent years, the economy has fallen victim to the violent turmoil that has seen Libya torn apart by two rival administrations and countless militias.

Today, while the guns have mostly fallen silent since a fragile October truce, the frontline still runs from the coastal city of Sirte to the “Oil Crescent” that holds 90 per cent of its crude deposits.

After the last upsurge in fighting from 2019-2020, and amid the Covid pandemic, the already struggling economy plummeted by 66.7 per cent last year, initial IMF estimates show.

Two killed as multiple bombs rock Afghan capital

At least two people, including a local police chief, were killed after multiple bomb blasts rocked the Afghan capital early Wednesday. Officials said.

The latest violence in Kabul follows a pattern of attacks during morning rush-hour traffic targeting prominent Afghans including politicians, journalists, activists and judges.

Police spokesman Ferais Faramarz told reporters that two people were killed and another wounded in their vehicle by a bomb in downtown Kabul.

Interior ministry spokesman Tariq Arian told AFP that one of those killed was a district police chief in the capital.

An AFP photographer at the scene said the bomb had ripped through the rear of a vehicle that appeared to be an armoured vehicle.

Minutes earlier, another blast targeting a vehicle in the same district wounded four people, Faramarz added.

A third blast targeted a police vehicle in Paghman district on the outskirts of Kabul.

Authorities did not say if the blasts were caused by so-called “sticky bombs” attached to the vehicles, or roadside improvised explosive devices.

Wednesday’s blasts come a day after militants shot dead four government employees in an ambush in the capital.

No group has so far claimed responsibility for the attacks. Afghan and US officials have blamed the Taliban for the wave of violence, but the group has denied the charges.

Pilots reported multiple problems with Indonesia jet before crash: report

INDONESIAN pilots had reported multiple problems with an ageing jet’s throttle system before it plunged into the sea after takeoff in January killing 62 passengers and crew, investigators said Wednesday.

The malfunction in the Sriwijaya Air Boeing 737-500’s engine control system was highlighted in a preliminary report on the January 9 crash, but investigators said it was too early to pinpoint an exact cause.

The 26-year-old plane – previously flown by US-based Continental Airlines and United Airlines – plunged around 3,000 metres (10,000 feet) into waters off Jakarta just minutes after takeoff.

Divers are still attempting to locate the cockpit voice recorder, which could provide vital clues to what the desperate crew was saying when the flight from Jakarta to Pontianak in Borneo went down.

On Wednesday investigators said they were probing the autothrottle system – and possible human error.

Crews on previous flights had reported that the system was “unserviceable” and it had been repaired several times before the fatal crash, the report said.

“The left (engine throttle) was moving backward too far while the right one was not moving at all – it was stuck,” said National Transportation Safety Committee investigator Nurcahyo Utomo.

Stirwijaya Air flight SJ182 came down just four minutes after setting off from Jakarta last month.

Minutes earlier, another blast targeting a vehicle in the same district wounded four people, Faramarz added.

A third blast targeted a police vehicle in Paghman district on the outskirts of Kabul.

Authorities did not say if the blasts were caused by so-called “sticky bombs” attached to the vehicles, or roadside improvised explosive devices.

Wednesday’s blasts come a day after militants shot dead four government employees in an ambush in the capital.

No group has so far claimed responsibility for the attacks. Afghan and US officials have blamed the Taliban for the wave of violence, but the group has denied the charges.

The oil tanker SVI-4000 passes in Indonesia’s offshore waters off Jakarta just minutes after taking off from Jakarta last month.

The left (engine throttle) was moving backward too far while the right one was not moving at all — it was stuck,” said National Transportation Safety Committee investigator Nurcahyo Utomo.

Pilots reported multiple problems with Indonesia jet before crash: report

INDONESIAN pilots had reported multiple problems with an ageing jet’s throttle system before it plunged into the sea after takeoff in January killing 62 passengers and crew, investigators said Wednesday.

The malfunction in the Sriwijaya Air Boeing 737-500’s engine control system was highlighted in a preliminary report on the January 9 crash, but investigators said it was too early to pinpoint an exact cause.

The 26-year-old plane – previously flown by US-based Continental Airlines and United Airlines – plunged around 3,000 metres (10,000 feet) into waters off Jakarta just minutes after takeoff.

Divers are still attempting to locate the cockpit voice recorder, which could provide vital clues to what the desperate crew was saying when the flight from Jakarta to Pontianak in Borneo went down.

On Wednesday investigators said they were probing the autothrottle system – and possible human error.

Crews on previous flights had reported that the system was “unserviceable” and it had been repaired several times before the fatal crash, the report said.

“The left (engine throttle) was moving backward too far while the right one was not moving at all — it was stuck,” said National Transportation Safety Committee investigator Nurcahyo Utomo.

Two killed as multiple bombs rock Afghan capital

At least two people, including a local police chief, were killed after multiple bomb blasts rocked the Afghan capital early Wednesday, officials said.

The latest violence in Kabul follows a pattern of attacks during morning rush-hour traffic targeting prominent Afghans including politicians, journalists, activists and judges.

Police spokesman Ferais Faramarz told reporters that two people were killed and another wounded in their vehicle by a bomb in downtown Kabul.

Interior ministry spokesman Tariq Arian told AFP that one of those killed was a district police chief in the capital.

An AFP photographer at the scene said the bomb had ripped through the rear of a vehicle that appeared to be an armoured vehicle.

Minutes earlier, another blast targeting a vehicle in the same district wounded four people, Faramarz added.

A third blast targeted a police vehicle in Paghman district on the outskirts of Kabul.

Authorities did not say if the blasts were caused by so-called “sticky bombs” attached to the vehicles, or roadside improvised explosive devices.

AUFC Winger Thiha Zaw signs for Shan United on loan

LEFT-WINGER Thiha Zaw has moved to Shan United from Ayeyawady United on loan for two years, the Shan United FC stated.

The Winger is good in both left-foot and right-foot and showed brilliant performances at Ayeyawady United in the previous season.

“Some clubs offered him to join their football squads, but Thiha Zaw chose Shan United for many reasons. Some clubs contacted me when my contract with Ayeyawady had finished – some with the good and high offer. But, I’ve had discussions with Shan United. They have been very patient, waiting for quite a while. They value and want me, and in return, I chose them with respect. “I know there are some players in the same position as me. They are also good, which is why they have a chance to play here. If not, it’s uneasy about being in the first-line-up. What matters most is that you need to know what the coach likes and needs. You need to play as he wants you to do. I’ll try not only for the team but for as well,” the Left-Winger added.—GNLM

Man. Utd reach FA Cup quarter-finals, Burnley crash out

LONDON—Scott McTominay sent Manchester United into the FA Cup quarter-finals as his extra-time strike sealed a hard-fought 1-0 win against West Ham on Tuesday.

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer’s side were well below their best in a scrappy fifth round tie at freezing, snow-dusted Old Trafford.

But a fine finish from Scotland midfielder McTominay ensured United advanced to the last eight for a seventh successive season.

United last won the FA Cup in 2016 and McTominay’s third goal in three games kept them in the hunt to lift the trophy for the 13th time.

After the frustration of the late Everton equalizer that denied their Premier League title challenge on Saturday, this was an essential result to lift the mood at United.

It was hardly an eye-catching performance however, with United labouring against defensive West Ham until McTominay and Bruno Fernandes were introduced as second half substitutes.

Bad dream puts Osaka on edge before Australian Open win

MELBOURNE — A “nervous” Naomi Osaka said she dreamed of defeat and feared the worst — before putting her worries to rest with a sweeping victory over Caroline Garcia at the Australian Open on Wednesday.

Osaka, the third seed, faced a tricky contest against the Frenchwoman, who was ranked a career-high of fourth in late 2018, but never gave her a sniff in the 6-2, 6-3 victory in 61 minutes.

The three-time Slam winner, however, had an uneasy feeling Wednesday, waking up in a panic after a nightmare. “Last night I had a dream that I lost this match, and I really didn’t feel good about it,” she said.

“My dreams are very telling of the future.— AFP

Atletico Madrid v Chelsea Champions League match moved to Bucharest

LONDON—Atletico Madrid’s home match against Chelsea in the Champions League last-16 has been moved from Spain to Bucharest as a result of coronavirus restrictions, UEFA confirmed on Wednesday.

The first-leg tie will be staged at the Arena Nationala in the Romanian capital.

Chelsea said in a statement on their website that the date of the match, February 23, and the kick-off time (2000 GMT) would remain the same. The second leg is scheduled to take place at Stamford Bridge in London on March 17. It is the latest European match to be switched to a different venue as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic. The Spanish government on Tuesday extended a ban on arrivals by air from Britain, Brazil and South Africa until March 2 over new variants.
