Perennial trees cannot immediately benefit the people but give shade and safety to posterity

FAMILIES of the Office of the Commander-in-Chief (Army, Navy and Air) and those from relevant military commands have been holding the monsoon tree-growing ceremonies since 2011, aimed at conserving the environment, contributing to easing the impacts of climate change, giving shade and supporting the State economy on one hand.

Chairman of the State Administration Council Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services

Senior General Min Aung Hlaing grew a teak tree at the first monsoon tree-growing ceremony of families of the Office of the Commander-in-Chief (Army, Navy and Air) near Yezin Dam in Zeyathiri Township of Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Monsoon tree-growing ceremonies are held as serving a national duty

Speaking on the occasion, the Senior General said that Tatmadaw has been holding the monsoon tree-growing ceremonies for over a decade on a yearly basis starting from 2011. Such ceremonies aim to sustain the forest resources of the State and conserve the environment and valuable ecosystems as a national duty.

Since 2011, families of Tatmadaw (Army, Navy and Air) have been planting more than 180,000 trees in order to conserve the environs of Yezin Dam and the ecosystem by holding monsoon-tree growing ceremonies, more than 100,000 trees of which are thriving now. The whole Tatmadaw grew more than 21 million saplings from 2011 to 2022, more than 15 million of which are thriving, accounting for more than 70 per cent.

Perennial trees cannot immediately benefit the people but give shade and safety to posterity.

The establishment of a forest needs to take more than 10 years. It cannot immediately benefit the people but give shade and safety to new generations. If a town and then the whole country can be greened, Myanmar will conform to the environment and will have the capacity to overcome natural disasters. Spending a large sum of money, time and labour on growing trees aims to green the State as a natural duty, so all people have to understand it and strive for the successful growing of trees.

Shape failures to be victories for future lives

AS A nature of human beings, everybody wishes to possess the victory in all things but they delay to accept the failure as a starting point leading to victory if necessary. As they are in fear of embracing failure due to missing relevant chances, whenever they see the failure, they physically and mentally suffer a tremble of excitement.

In fact, those who secured the victory actually miss the chance how to prepare to face failure and how they can overcome challenges in accepting failure. So, it can be said that the winners actually lose the chance to know ways and means to encounter failure despite securing just a win.

Everybody needs teachers to give ways for them throughout their lives. But, school teachers cannot go along with them. Actually, mistakes and failures in all events of life are the best teachers for all. But, those wishing to secure victory must enhance their capacity to analyze failures and to know how to overcome failures so as to lead to victory.

Those who embraced failure have to overcome the challenges of life with the aim of not facing failure again. Hence, they seek the best ways and means how to secure victory as well as how to leave failure behind them. As a result, those losers try to accept the concept that they must try hard to avoid failure and must never do the same moves to face failure. Such a valuable decision will push them to the victory of their goal.

Practically, everybody needs to change their mindsets to accept a concept that they have to deeply desire to win the victory in order to secure an important thing. If so, the powerful keenness in their minds will help them overcome any challenges. If not, any of their moves will lead to failure.

Moreover, everybody needs to seek the best lessons from their failures. They have to dare to verify the rights and wrongs in the lessons. And, they must choose the rights to be applied in their lives as well as must analyze the root causes of wrongs. If so, they will have to choose the benefit from the failures. These will be good moves leading to victory. Hence, everybody needs to take care of past events that the famous persons in global history unintentionally made mistakes in their immature lives but they improved themselves by taking lessons from the bitter past events.

Everybody needs teachers to give ways for them throughout their lives. But, school teachers cannot go along with them. Actually, mistakes and failures in all events of life are the best teachers for all. But, those wishing to secure victory must enhance their capacity to analyze failures and to know how to overcome failures so as to lead to victory.

A STROKE occurs when blood circulation is cut off in the brain—causing a medical emergency that warrants immediate attention. When blood doesn't reach brain cells, they don't get the oxygen and nutrients they need and begin to die within minutes.

As a result, you can experience facial drooping, weakness in the limbs, confusion, slurred speech, and severe headache, among other symptoms. Knowing the symptoms of stroke and seeking medical care quickly is critical to prevent serious complications or death from occurring.

Common Symptoms

There are two main types of strokes: ischemic and hemorrhagic. Generally, symptoms of stroke tend to be similar despite the type of stroke you or someone else is having. However, symptoms can range in severity depending on the artery (blood vessel) in the brain that is affected.

Strokes can be very dangerous—and not only can they lead to permanent disability, but they're also the fifth leading cause of death in the US. That's why it's important to look out for the following symptoms:

- Numbness: Feeling numb, having a droopy face, or experiencing paralysis on one side of the body is common. You may feel weak or unable to move during this time.
- Cognitive (brain-related) symptoms: Cognitive symptoms of a stroke can set on quickly. These include sudden bouts of confusion, slurred or abnormal speech, difficulty understanding what others are saying, and problems with memory.
- Visual symptoms: A stroke can also disrupt your eyes, causing symptoms such as temporary loss of vision in one or both eyes, blurriness, and difficulty seeing and focusing on objects.
- Motor symptoms: It's also common to experience difficulties with movement, such as a loss of balance, difficulty walking, dizziness, and loss of motor control.
- Other symptoms: Some people might have a severe headache that suddenly arises with no other known cause, nausea, and vomiting.

While these symptoms are most common, regardless of the type of stroke you or someone else is having, symptoms can slightly vary depending on the artery in your brain that becomes blocked.

Transient Ischemic Attack Symptoms

In some cases, people experience a transient ischemic attack, which is a warning sign and precursor of stroke. Though an ischemic attack is not viewed as serious as a stroke, this is still a medical emergency.

Symptoms of an ischemic attack typically lasting only 10 to 20 minutes—rarely over an hour—and often mimic the symptoms of a stroke. You may likely experience numbness or weakness, speech difficulties, and blurring or loss of vision in one eye.

Medial Cerebral Artery Stroke Symptoms

When strokes affect the medial cerebral artery (MCA)—a major artery that separates the frontal and temporal lobes of the brain—you might experience the following symptoms:

- Weakness in one arm or limb
- Drooping on one side of the face
- Speech problems
- Difficulties with comprehension
- Frontal lobe: Controls your executive functioning, such as problem-solving, decision-making, memory, and learning
- Temporal lobe: Gives you the ability to understand language and controls your hearing
- Parietal lobe: Helps your process sensory information and manages your senses, including touch, temperature, pressure, and pain
- Occipital lobe: Manages your visual perception and eyesight, including recognizing shapes and colours, seeing objects, and recognizing visual stimuli

Anterior Cerebral Artery Stroke Symptoms

If a stroke affects your anterior or cerebral artery—a blood vessel that supplies the frontal and parietal lobes of the brain—becomes blocked, you might experience:

- Impaired judgment
- Loss of sight or blurry vision on one side

- Weakness or numbness on one side
- Urinary incontinence (not being able to hold in your pee)
- Changes in a walking pattern or the inability to lift your feet

Posterior Cerebral Artery Stroke Symptoms

The two posterior cerebral arteries supply blood to the occipital lobes of the back of the brain. If blood flow in either of these arteries becomes interrupted, you may experience cognitive symptoms such as:

- Blindness in one or both eyes
- Sudden changes in mood
- Difficulty recognizing or making out objects
- Trouble remembering things

Vertebral/Basilar Artery Stroke Symptoms

If the vertebral or basilar arteries—major vessels that supply blood to the back of the brain—are blocked due to a stroke, you can have the following symptoms:

- Rapid and repetitive eye movements (known as nystagmus)
- Dizziness
- Double-vision
- Blindness in one eye
- Trouble understanding language
- Difficulty swallowing (known as dysphagia)
- Fainting
- Tingling in the face (known as facial hyperesthesia)
- Loss of coordination or motor skills

When to See a Healthcare Provider

Any sign of a stroke is a medical emergency and warrants visiting the emergency department or calling 911. As laid out by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), an acronym, FAST, can help you remember the signs of a stroke in another person. This stands for:

- Face (F): Facial symptoms such as drooping or an uneven smile
- Arms (A): Arm weakness or numbness, which can sometimes affect one whole side of the body
- Speech (S): Speaking problems such as trouble forming words or having slurred speech

Fascinating Insights and Life-Saving Information

By Yin Nwe Ko

Stroke, a medical emergency, occurs when blood flow to a part of the brain is interrupted or reduced, resulting in the deprivation of oxygen and nutrients to brain cells. ILLUSTRATION: PIX FOR VISUAL PURPOSE/VECTORSTOCK noma, malignant melanoma, renal cell carcinoma and bronchogenic carcinoma, blood coagulopathies, angiopathy following degenerative disease of intracranial vessels, or intake of sympathomimetic drugs like cocaine and amphetamine, especially in younger individuals.

Haemorrhagic stroke is of two types – intracerebral haemorrhage, which occurs within the brain tissue, and subarachnoid haemorrhage, where the leaked blood occupies the subarachnoid space. The bleed may be small or large. Transient ischemic attack: A transient ischemic attack (TIA) refers to transient neurological symptoms that occur due to temporary ischemia to a part of the brain.

Symptoms

As different parts of the brain control different parts of the body, symptoms will depend on the part of the brain affected and the extent of the damage.

The main symptoms are:

Paralysis or numbness or inability to move parts of the face, arm, or leg - particularly on one side of the body.

Confusion- including trouble with speaking

- Headache with vomiting
- Trouble seeing in one or both eyes
- Metallic taste in the mouth
- Difficulty in swallowing
- Trouble in walking (impaired coordination)
- Dystonia
- Alexia
- Agnosia

The risk factors include:

- Overweight
- Sedentary life
- Binge Drinking
- Diabetes
- Smoking
- High blood pressure
- High cholesterol
- Family history of stroke
- Cardiovascular diseases
- Age - people above age 55 are at higher risk
- Gender - men are at high risk of stroke than women

Diagnosis

To determine the most appropriate stroke treatment, an emergency team needs to evaluate the type of stroke a person is having and the areas of the brain affected.

Physical examination

The patient's symptoms, medical history, blood pressure, and blood vessels at the back of the eyes are checked.

Blood test

To find out the time taken for clotting of blood.

CT scan

Images of the brain can show a haemorrhage, tumour, stroke, or other medical conditions.

Ultrasound

To check the blood flow in the carotid arteries and to check for plaque, if any.

Magnetic resonance imaging (MRI)

MRI of brain tissue to diagnose an ischemic stroke or brain haemorrhages.

Cerebral angiogram

Dyes are injected to get a detailed view of brain and neck blood vessels visible under X-ray.

Echocardiogram

To check for any sources of clots that could have travelled to the brain and led to a stroke.

Treatments

Treatment is based on the type of stroke. For ischemic stroke or transient ischemic attack, medication or surgery or both can be recommended and for hemorrhagic stroke, surgery is recommended.

Complications

Stroke may lead to severe complications:

- Paralysis or loss of muscle movement: The patient may become paralyzed on one side of the body, or lose control of certain muscles, such as those on one side of the face or one arm
- Difficulty in talking or swallowing
- Memory loss or thinking difficulties: It also affects thinking, making judgments, reasoning, and understanding concepts
- Emotional problems: stroke survivors may develop depression
- Changes in behaviour and self-care ability: Stroke survivors may become more withdrawn and less social or more impulsive. They may need help with grooming and daily chores

Prevention

Many stroke prevention strategies are the same as the strategies to prevent heart disease. In general, some preventive tips for stroke patients are as follows:

- Diet and healthy eating: Following a proper diet may avoid the risk of a second stroke.
- Decreasing the amount of cholesterol and saturated fat in your diet.
- Controlling Diabetes
- Monitoring blood pressure: As high blood pressure exerts continuous pressure on the walls of the arteries it may lead to an arterial block.
- Avoiding illicit drugs
- Exercising: Consult your doctor before starting an exercise program.
- Quit smoking and alcohol.

Questions To Ask Your Doctor

- How long should I continue the medication?
- Can I stop the medication once the symptoms subside?
- How frequently should I do the follow-up check?
- What are the foods to avoid?
- When can I start going to work?

Nutrition

Foods to eat:

Fruits and vegetables: eat plenty of fruit and vegetables; between 5-7 servings per day

Whole grain bread and cereals containing fibre and vitamins: May reduce the risk of stroke

Lean protein: Limiting the amount of cholesterol is another important step in reducing the risk of another stroke

Choose low-fat meats or other protein

Limit salt:

Eating too much salt/sodium may cause you to retain water and raise your blood pressure

Foods to avoid:

Heavy cholesterol foods
foods rich in salt and sugar
Alcohol

Now, I assume that my reader might have understood somewhat knowledge about stroke and some dos and don'ts. May all of us escape from the bad effect of stroke forever.

675 million people worldwide without electricity: report

A full 675 million people worldwide still lack access to electricity, mainly in sub-Saharan Africa, according to a report published Tuesday by several international organizations. Despite significant efforts and some progress, the world continues to face a dramatic energy access gap, according to the report by the International Energy Agency (IEA), the International Renewable Energy Agency (IRENA), the United Nations Statistics Division, the World Bank and the World Health Organization.

The report cautioned that the world remained off track to ensure clean and affordable energy access for all by 2030 — one of the so-called Sustainable Development Goals set by all UN countries in 2015.

The world has seen “a recent slowdown in the global pace of electrification,” World Bank vice president for infrastructure

Public financial flows supporting clean energy in poorer countries had been decreasing even before the Covid pandemic hit. PHOTO: PIX FOR VISUAL PURPOSE/ IRENA/AFP

Guangzhe Chen said in a joint statement.

While the number of people living without electricity has been cut in half in the past decade, from 1.1 billion in 2010, 675 million people were still doing without in 2021, the report said.

Around 80 per cent of them live in sub-Saharan Africa, where the electricity access deficit has remained basically unchanged since 2010, the report said.

It highlighted progress elsewhere though, in particular the increased rate of using renewables in the power sector, but warned this progress was “insufficient” to reach the UN-set targets.

“While the clean energy transition is moving faster than many think, there is still a great deal of work needed to deliver sustainable, secure and affordable access to modern energy services for the billions of people who live without it,” Fatih Birol, IEA executive director, said in the statement.

Citing IRENA data, the report also cautioned that public financial flows supporting clean energy in poorer countries had been decreasing even before the Covid pandemic hit.—AFP

Italy counts on 1.2% GDP growth in 2023

THE growth outlook for Italy's economy continues to improve, although major challenges, including unusually high prices, are expected to last through the end of this year, the country's main statistical entity said on Tuesday. The country's National Institute of Statistics (ISTAT) said in its “Prospects for the Italian Economy in 2023-2024” report that gross domestic product (GDP) is projected to grow by 1.2 per cent this year and by 1.1 per cent in 2024.

Both figures are well below the 3.7 per cent growth rate registered in 2022, but above ISTAT's earlier estimates for both years.

The estimate also shows that the economy is expected to continue its recovery from its 0.1 per cent contraction in the final quarter of 2022. ISTAT data released last week showed that the economy grew by 0.6 per cent in the first quarter of 2023, meaning that the country has avoided a technical recession, which is defined as two consecutive quarters of negative growth. Combined with the projection for the full year, economic growth should speed up.—AFP

IN their second major action against a big crypto player in two days, US regulators sued Coinbase on Tuesday, alleging its failure to register as a securities exchange venue exposed investors to risk.

Shares of Coinbase tumbled

Hackers issue ‘ultimatum’ over payroll data breach

A cybercrime gang reportedly based in Russia has issued “an ultimatum” to British and other companies targeted in a recent large-scale hack of payroll data, the BBC reported on Wednesday.

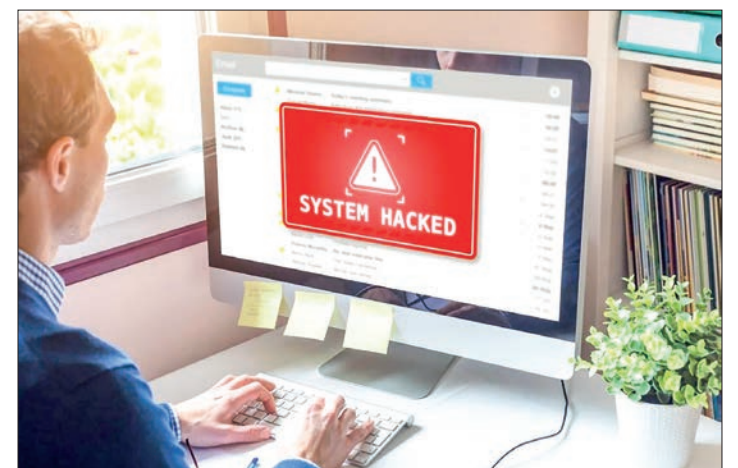

The Clop group has been blamed by cybersecurity experts for the breach announced last week, which saw payroll data of more than 100,000 staff stolen at firms including the BBC, British Airways and high street pharmacy Boots.

The hacking gang is now said to have posted a notice on the dark web in broken English warning those affected to email them before June 14 or face the private data being published, the BBC said.

“This is announcement to educate companies who use Progress MOVEit product that chance is that we download a lot of your data as part of exceptional exploit,” a blog post purportedly by Clop stated, according to the broadcaster.

It went on to urge victim organisations to send an email to the gang to begin a negotiation on its dark web portal, it added.—AFP

Pullback in exports widens US trade gap in April

THE US trade deficit grew in April on a pullback in exports, bringing the gap to its widest since October 2022, according to government data released on Wednesday.

Although the country's imports have been boosted by resilient consumer spending, analysts expect this trend to weaken as well going forward, while tighter lending conditions weigh on investments.

The anticipation is that trade could bring negative growth to gross domestic product in the second quarter of the year.

In April, the overall trade deficit was $74.6 billion, expanding slightly less than expected by $14 billion, according to Commerce Department data.

Exports fell by $9.2 billion to $249 billion in the month, while imports edged up by $4.8 billion to $323.6 billion.

"Net foreign trade often is sidelined in discussions of headline GDP growth, but it has been a huge swing factor since Covid," said Pantheon Macroeconomics economist Ian Shepherdson and Kieran Clancy in a recent report.

They added that weakening in foreign trade will likely be "accompanied by a further drag from the inventory component, and a steep drop in investment in business equipment, making an outright drop in headline GDP more likely."

The slide in exports came on the back of a decrease in value of goods shipments, such as crude oil and fuel oil, along with some consumer goods.

Imports of goods picked up with support from auto vehicles and parts, as well as some industrial supplies and materials. — AFP

Rights group sues Ethiopian Airlines for 'discriminating' against Tigrayans

Ethiopian Airlines has rejected the claims in the lawsuit. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

NATIONAL flag carrier Ethiopian Airlines has been summoned for a court hearing Friday over claims by a human rights group that it discriminated against travellers from Tigray, according to court documents seen by AFP. The airline, which has a monopoly on domestic flights, resumed air links between the capital Addis Ababa and the Tigray region after a peace deal was signed in November 2022 ending two years of conflict in northern Ethiopia.

But according to Ethiopian organization Human Rights First, the airline banned the sale of tickets for flights from two working airports in Tigray -- in the capital Mekele and the city of Shire -- to Tigrayans aged between 15 and 60. The "only exceptions" were for mothers travelling with children, or people with a medical letter, according to a member of Human Rights First, who spoke to AFP on condition of anonymity.

According to the group's lawsuit, Ethiopian Airlines also systematically applied the maximum fare for flights from Tigray to the Ethiopian capital.

Ethiopian Airlines, which is wholly state-owned, has rejected the claims in a written response to the civil court, and called for them to be dismissed. — AFP

Japan dumps seawater into tunnel built for Fukushima nuke wastewater discharge

JAPAN has started dumping seawater into an underwater tunnel built to release nuclear-contaminated water into the ocean from the crippled Fukushima plant, local media reported on Tuesday. Tokyo Electric Power Company (TEPCO), the plant's operator, said the process started on Monday afternoon, according to the national broadcaster NHK.

While Japan's plan to discharge radioactive water into the ocean has been facing raging opposition from home and abroad, Monday's move was conducted without any early announcement.

According to TEPCO, the tunnel, the structure of which was completed in April, is expected to be filled with about 6,000 tonnes of seawater by around Tuesday noon. Once filled with water, it will guide nuclear-contaminated water from the plant to a point about one kilometre offshore. — Xinhua

EU countries try to thrash out refugee burden-sharing

EU interior ministers meeting Thursday will seek agreement on a long-stalled revision of the bloc's asylum and migration rules that is aimed at making burden-sharing fairer.

But diplomats cautioned the odds of a deal were still "50-50", with increasing numbers of European Union members adopting hardline policies on the issue.

The proposal on the table at the meeting in Luxembourg calls for compulsory solidarity among EU countries, but with an option of showing that in one of two ways.

Its priority is for EU countries to share the hosting of asylum-seekers, taking in many that arrive in nations on the bloc's outer rim, mainly Greece and Italy.

Those refusing would instead be required to pay a sum — not yet revealed, but which various diplomats put at between 10,000 ($11,000) and 30,000 euros per asylum-seeker — to the countries doing the hosting.

A preliminary agreement of the EU's 27 countries on that basis would open the way to negotiations with the European Parliament for legislation that could be adopted before European elections in June next year.

The difficult reform has jumped up the bloc's agenda as the number of asylum-seekers rises, after a pause caused by travel restrictions during the Covid pandemic.

'Well-balanced' compromise

The European Commission put forward its suggestion for a new migration and asylum pact in 2020 based on a quota system for taking in asylum-seekers.

But that plan quickly hit the buffers after refusals from Hungary, Poland and other countries that objected to any requirement to take in migrants. — AFP

Sunak announces first AI summit, pitching UK role from US

BRITISH Prime Minister Rishi Sunak on Wednesday announced a world-first summit on artificial intelligence, seeking a leading role for the UK in limiting potential doomsday risks as he visited Washington.

Sunak will meet President Joe Biden at the White House on Thursday for talks during which he will also voice unstinting support for Ukraine, as the young Conservative leader wages an often uphill battle to show the UK's post-Brexit relevance.

Opening his two-day trip, the prime minister announced that Britain would hold the world's first summit on artificial intelligence in the second half of the year. "AI has an incredible potential to transform our lives for the better. But we need to make sure it is developed and used in a way that is safe and secure," Sunak said.

"Time and time again throughout history we have invented paradigm-shifting new technologies and we have harnessed them for the good of humanity. That is what we must do again," he added.

Ukraine dam's destruction increases mines threat: Red Cross

THE destruction of the Kakhovka dam in Ukraine will have a catastrophic effect on locating landmines in the affected region, the Red Cross warned Wednesday.

"We knew where the hazards were," said Erik Tollefsen, head of the Weapon Contamination Unit at the International Committee of the Red Cross. "Now we don't know."

"All we know is that they are somewhere downstream."

"This is a major concern because it will affect not just the population, but also all of those that are coming in to help," he added. Russia accuses Ukraine of blowing up key ammonia pipeline

MOSCOW said Wednesday that a Ukrainian "sabotage" group had blown up a section of the Togliatti-Odesa pipeline that Russia used to export ammonia before the start of the offensive.

The 2,500-kilometre (1,534 mile) pipeline is part of the international talks on allowing grain exports from Ukraine amid the conflict with Russia.

Ukrainian officials have accused Russian forces of firing at the ammonia pipeline near Masyutivka, as the village is known in Ukrainian. "A Ukrainian sabotage and reconnaissance group blew up the Togliatti-Odesa ammonia pipeline" near the village of Masyutovka in the northeastern Kharkiv region on Monday evening, Russia's defence ministry said.

The ministry said that some civilians had been wounded, adding that "they received the necessary medical care". — AFP

Sovereignty fears delay Pacific-Australia security pacts

AUSTRALIA'S bid to lock in security pacts with two Pacific neighbours and curb China's growing regional clout has hit a stumbling block, with island leaders voicing sovereignty concerns.

Leaders in Papua New Guinea and Vanuatu have raised issues with the proposed security agreements, which had appeared all but finalized, putting their approval in question. Both pacts are aimed at shoring up Australia's position as a first-choice security partner for Pacific neighbours, who are also being courted by China. Vanuatu Prime Minister Ishmael Kalsakau on Tuesday said some in his nation believed a pact agreed last year, but not yet ratified, could give the Australian military too much power.

"We must remove the stigma that the agreement is one-sided and does not reflect Vanuatu's sovereignty," he said. "Thinking that some troops from Australia will enter the country without visas and access our sovereign data will not happen, unless we agree and give our informed consent." His comments came after Papua New Guinea rejected a draft defence treaty, with Prime Minister James Marape saying that certain, unspecified provisions encroached on his country's "sovereign rights". — AFP

China, India expelling each other's journalists amid tense ties

CHINA and India have been kicking out each other's accredited journalists recently, according to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, amid tense bilateral relations that could affect their cooperation as members of the BRICS grouping that also includes Brazil, Russia and South Africa.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Mao Ning said last week that New Delhi has refused to review and approve visa applications for Chinese journalists since 2020 and there is only one Chinese reporter in India, for whom the visa has not been renewed.

With the number of Chinese journalists stationed in India about to drop to zero, Beijing has "no choice but to take appropriate countermeasures to safeguard the legitimate rights and interests of Chinese media organizations," Mao said at a press conference on 31 May. The Wall Street Journal reported on 30 May that Indian media outlets had four remaining journalists based in China at the beginning of the year, but at least two of them had not been granted visas to return to the country, citing a Chinese official. — Kyodo

US prosecutors have told Donald Trump's lawyers that he is the target of a probe into his handling of classified documents after leaving the presidency, in a sign he might be indicted, US media reported Wednesday night.

The notice came from the office of special counsel Jack Smith, The New York Times, CNN and other new outlets said, and gives the clearest sign yet that prosecutors are moving closer to charging the former president, who is seeking a return to the White House in 2024. The Times, citing "two people familiar with the matter", said it was not clear when Trump's team had been told he was subject in the investigation.

Several children injured in mass stabbing in French Alps

A man armed with a knife attacked a group of preschool children playing by a lake in the French Alps Thursday, wounding four as well as an adult and sending shock waves through the country.

The suspect is a Syrian in his early 30s who was granted refugee status in Sweden in April, a police source said.

Witnesses described the suspected knifeman running around in a frenzy, apparently attacking people at random, before he was shot by police near the banks of Lake Annecy. "He wanted to attack everyone. I moved away and he lunged at an old man and woman and stabbed the old man," former professional footballer Anthony Le Tallec, who was running in the park, told the local Dauphine Libere newspaper.

Another witness, named Malo, told the BFM television channel that the culprit attacked the children before the old man and was "shouting, but it wasn't really comprehensible". — AFP

LIVERPOOL signed Argentine World Cup winner Alexis Mac Allister from Brighton on Thursday for a fee that could rise to a reported £55 million ($69 million).

The 24-year-old is the first piece in a midfield rebuild for Liverpool, who finished a disappointing fifth in the Premier League.

"It feels amazing," said Mac Allister, who is understood to have signed a five-year deal at Anfield. "It's a dream come true. It's amazing to be here and I can't wait to get started.

"I wanted to be in from the first day of pre-season, so it's good that everything is done. I'm looking forward to meeting my teammates. "It was a fantastic year for me — World Cup, what we achieved with Brighton — but now it's time to think about Liverpool and try to be a better player and a better human being every day."

Liverpool manager Jurgen Klopp is seeking to bolster his midfield options after the departures of James Milner, Naby Keita and Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain.

The club were priced out of a move for England teenage star Jude Bellingham, who is set to join Real Madrid after the clubs agreed a fee of 103 million euros ($110 million).

Liverpool, who struggled last term after nearly completing an unprecedented quadruple in 2021/22, have been criticized for failing to reinforce their ageing midfield over recent transfer windows.

Rice set to leave West Ham, says club chairman

WEST Ham chairman David Sullivan has confirmed captain Declan Rice will be sold during the summer transfer window, just hours after the club ended their decades-long trophy drought.

The England midfielder became only the third Hammers skipper to lift silverware after a 2-1 victory over Fiorentina in the Europa Conference League final on Wednesday.

However, Sullivan admitted a gentleman's agreement means they will allow the 24-year-old, who has been strongly linked with a move to Arsenal, to leave.

Asked whether lifting the trophy in Prague was Rice's last action as a West Ham player, Sullivan told Talksport: "I think it has to be. We promised him he could go.

"He set his heart on going and in due course he has to get on and we have to get a replacement.

"It is not something we wanted to happen. We offered him £200,000 ($249,000) a week 18 months ago and he turned it down. You can't keep a player who doesn't want to be there.

"I think the offers will start to come today. Three or four clubs have shown interest but out of respect to West Ham, while we're still playing, you don't make offers for players."

Disqualified Japanese player Kato becomes French Open champion

JAPAN'S Miyu Kato became a French Open champion on Thursday, four days after she was controversially disqualified from the women's doubles for accidentally hitting a ball girl.

Kato and her German partner Tim Puetz defeated Bianca Andreescu and Michael Venus 4-6, 6-4, 10-6 in the mixed doubles final at Roland Garros.

"It has been challenging mentally in the last few days after my unjust disqualification from the women's doubles," Kato told the Court Philippe Chatrier crowd, reading from a prepared statement. "Thanks to all the players for their heartfelt messages of support. I used that positive energy on court here today.

"I am now looking for a positive result to my appeal so I can reclaim my prize money, points and my reputation."

Puetz said he hoped the title would help Kato after the drama of the default. "I hope this is redemption for you after what happened. The support you received was well deserved."
