Mandalay's Kyun Kyaung reopens this month after Thai experts' renovation

AS Thai experts have completed the renovation of the historic Kyun Kyaung (teak monastery) donated by King Mindon in Mandalay, it will be opened this month, according to Ko Htake Tin Aung, King Mindon's great-great-grandson, who helped in the renovation.

It is situated in the compound of the Dhammikarama Shwegyin monastery in Mandalay, and merit-sharing ceremony will be held on 18 February to mark the completion of the renovation with authentic preservation.

"After this monastery was built, it was donated to the first founder Sayadaw of Shwegyin Sect along with the land. For the Shwegyin Sect, this place is its original auspicious ground.

The photo depicts the general view of the Kyun Kyaung (teak monastery) in Mandalay.

Its damages were repaired by the State Law and Order Restoration Council and the Mandalay City Development Committee in 1992. But it continued to deteriorate and worsened in 2014-2015. While the Sayadaw was considering repairing the monastery, he contacted Thai well-wishers. Dhammakaya Monk from Thailand sent a repair team. Both donors and workers are coming from the Thai side," said Ko Htake Tin Aung.

Pitawon Prontawon, the chief architect of the Thai maintenance team and a well-wisher, died of illness during the work, and his memorial statue will also be unveiled at the opening ceremony.

"Thai people renovated it, but there is no Thai style or Thai work. Based on the duplicates of all the original works, the maintenance team just renovated with authenticity," he explained. — Htet Oo Maung/ZN

Mon State produces 300 tonnes of sun-dried coarse salt in Jan 2024

AROUND 300 tonnes of new sun-dried coarse salt were produced in Mon State in January 2024, according to an official from the Mon State Salt Business Association.

It rained slightly in January in Mon State, and salt production declined somewhat. In this year's salt season, it is predicted to produce about 45,000 tonnes of sun-dried coarse salt, he said.

"Some were produced before rain in January. There was a slight rain on 26 January so the production declined slightly. Now it is produced again. The production was just about 300 tonnes in January," he said.

In Mon State, sun-dried salt is mainly manufactured in Thanbyuzayat township and majorly sold to Taninthayi Region as well as Mandalay Region. Currently, the price of coarse salt is about K170 per viss, and the price of refined salt is between K320 and K330 a viss, he said.

"The salt price fluctuates depending on supply and demand. Salt manufacturing needs to rely on the weather, so the price gets high if the yield is low when it rains. There was rain in January so the price climbs up about K10-K20 a viss," he said. The export licence is still underway for exporting Mon State-produced sun-dried salt to Japan and South Korea. — MT/ZS

Corn price falls back in domestic market

WITH sluggish demand from domestic and foreign markets, the corn prices are gradually declining to K1,140 per viss in mid-February from K1,200 recorded in early January.

Myanmar exports corn to China and Thailand through the border. Also, it delivers it to China, India, Vietnam, and the Philippines by sea at the present time, according to the Myanmar Corn Industrial Association.

Thailand nodded corn imports under zero tariff (with Form-D) between 1 February and 31 August. However, Thailand imposes a maximum tax rate of 73 per cent on corn imports to protect the rights of their growers if the corn is imported during the corn season of Thailand.

China has been purchasing Myanmar's corn through cross-border trade under the opium substitution programme. Legitimate corn trade between Myanmar and China commenced at the end of 2022. A total of 112 Myanmar companies have been permitted for corn exports.

Safeguard consumer rights: A call for genuine, quality products

IRRESPECTIVE of socio-economic status, individuals from diverse backgrounds all share a common struggle to meet three fundamental needs: sustenance, clothing, and shelter. These necessities are universal, forming an integral part of daily life that cannot be overlooked or dismissed. Consequently, regardless of their financial standing, all people are consumers in their own right, thereby entitled to consumer rights.

The term "consumer" encompasses not only the acquisition of edible items but also the procurement of various essential materials for daily living, including capital goods, intermediate goods, and manufacturing products. Despite their diverse nature, all these products contribute to the well-being of consumers in their everyday lives.

Foremost among these needs is the requirement for food, a critical component of daily sustenance. The food trade sector necessitates effective technological management to mitigate potential hazards within the food supply chain. Adhering to the World Trade Organization regulations, the Technical Barriers to Trade Agreement and the Sanitary and Phytosanitary (SPS) Agreement are essential for preventing dangers to humans, plants, and animals.

Prioritizing consumer interests mandates that the production chains for all food items adhere to stringent safety measures. Participants in the food supply chain must implement technological strategies to prevent potential dangers and deliberate threats, thereby safeguarding consumer rights. Simultaneously, authorities must institute robust food security management systems to counter manufacturing and food processing malpractices.

Deceptive practices in the food industry include substituting original products with inferior alternatives, mislabeling commodities, smuggling of substandard goods, illegal additions to products, production of counterfeit items, and mixing with other substances. In Myanmar, the populace faces critical issues such as the adulteration of edible oils and the proliferation of low-quality and illegal medicines. It is crucial to recognize that seemingly minor problems can escalate into significant challenges within the realm of consumer affairs.

In Myanmar, governmental and relevant authorities actively combat malpractices in consumer affairs, penalizing those who violate consumer laws in producing and distributing food items. Simultaneously, social organizations play a pivotal role in raising awareness about consumer rights and broadening consumers' understanding. While challenges persist in the domestic market, collaborative efforts between authorities and consumers are essential to address worsening problems in consumer affairs. Implementing proper food processing rules and techniques is imperative for the collective well-being of all consumers.

THE Kyaiktiyo Pagoda was built more than 2,500 years ago, and legend has it that the pagoda was constructed on a hair relic that was given to a hermit by Buddha Himself. The hermit treasured the sacred hair and hid it in his hair knot until he found a boulder resembling his head on which he then built a pagoda to enshrine it.

Pagoda upon a hermit's head: In the Mon language, the word "Kyaik" means "Pagoda" and "Yo" means "to carry on the hermit's head." The word "ti" in Mon means "hermit", thus "Kyaiktiyo" means "pagoda upon a hermit's head".

The Kyaiktiyo Pagoda is one of Myanmar's three most sacred Buddhist pilgrimage sites, along with the Shwedagon Pagoda in Yangon, and is one of the world's most important pilgrim sites to Buddhists and the second most important in all of Myanmar's religious relics. It's also known worldwide and attracts people from far and near to flock there to experience it in person because the Golden Rock perched on the edge of a hill is of great astonishment.

Kyaiktiyo is a 20-foot-tall pagoda perching on top of a mountain. The mountain's name, "Kyaiktiyo", translates to "Pagoda on a hermit's head". "The Rock," which appears to be in gold, is actually a granite boulder covered with gold leaves applied to the Rock by Buddha devotees.

According to legend, the great granite boulder is kept in place by a single strand of the Buddha's hair that He Himself gave in a talk to a hermit during one of his visits to the Rock. He tucked the strand of hair from the left of his own head, safely bringing Buddha's strand to his king. The hermit instructed that his gift was to be enshrined under a rock shaped like a hermit's head. Fortunately for the king, he had inherited supernatural powers from his father, Zawgyi, a proficient alchemist and his mother, a serpent dragon princess. With his parents' help, they found the Rock, which would finally complete the shrine. At the bottom of the sea, the king had a ship constructed to carry the Rock to the top of the mountain. It's this strand of hair that, according to the legend, stops the Rock from tumbling down the hill. The boat, which was used to transport the Rock, had turned into stone, which explains why the pagoda looks a bit like the ship enshrined in the complex with its magnificent weight perfectly balanced on the edge of a cliff. The Golden Rock is truly a natural and extraordinary sight, which is why it is regarded with such sacred astonishment. The scenery from the Golden Rock is a spectacular sight, and many visitors stay behind the Rock to watch the sunset. The Kyaiktiyo shrine complex consists of several viewing platforms, pagodas, and Buddha shrines. Devotees gather in the area behind the Rock to pray and make offerings, and almost everyone attaches a golden leaf to the Rock as an act of merit. A glimpse of the fascinating Golden Rock is believed to be enough to inspire and enlighten any person to turn to Buddhism. Also, according to legend, pilgrims who blessed with wealth and respect. Myanmar, as the title of this post states, is in the land of golden pagodas. Yes, you are correct. Kyaiktiyo Pagoda is a well-known Buddhist pilgrimage site. It is a small pagoda (7.3 metres or 24 feet) built on the top of a granite boulder.

Constructed in 574 BC, Kyaiktiyo Pagoda is one of the world's most important pilgrimage sites for Buddhists and the third most important pilgrimage site in Myanmar after Shwedagon Pagoda in Yangon and the Maha Muni Buddha Image in Mandalay. The Golden Rock, situated at the edge of a hill, is of great importance. It looks like it's defying gravity, and legend says that the Rock is able to stay balanced; it's being held balanced by a hair from Buddha.

The link to Buddha is the reason why so many people make the trip there each year. But regardless of faith or religion, it's an astonishing place where you truly take your breath away.

It's said that the Rock has been positioned there for more than 2,500 years; it's been entirely gilded with gold, making it all the more impressive. Buddhists believe that the power of the relic enshrined in the pagoda relating to the religious story of Buddha's hair keeps it in place.

Kyaiktiyo Pagoda is a stunning place. There are many treasures, and you might want to visit it. It's one of the favourite places for so many people worldwide to visit to experience the exotic attraction after all.

Gene therapy improves advanced heart failure in animal model: Study

Chronic heart failure, characterized by severe weakening of the cardiac muscle, has been traditionally considered irreversible. However, a study suggests that advanced heart failure may not necessarily be a point of no return.

DURING a heart attack, blood stops flowing into the heart. Without oxygen, a portion of the heart muscle dies.

The heart muscle does not regenerate, instead, it replaces dead tissue with a scar made of cells called fibroblasts that do not help the heart pump. If there is too much scarring, the heart gradually enlarges (dilates), weakens, and eventually ceases working.

Chronic heart failure

"The current thought is that advanced or chronic heart failure, a stage in which the cardiac muscle has become too weak, is a point of no return. The present understanding is that it is not possible to stimulate a heart in this condition to generate new heart cells to repair itself and that only palliative treatment is available to patients," said corresponding author Dr Tamer M A. Mohamed, associate professor of surgery and medicine and director of cardiac regeneration at Baylor College of Medicine.

"In this study published in the journal Cardiovascular Research, we show that advanced heart failure can be treated to improve cardiac function in an animal model." In a previous study, Mohamed and his collaborators had successfully used gene therapy to improve acute cardiac dysfunction in animals. Their method effectively and specifically delivered genes that promote proliferation to heart cells, generating new heart muscle.

Blood flowing

This approach not only strengthened the heart improving its ability to keep the blood flowing, but also prevented typical subsequent congestion in the liver, kidneys and lungs in rats and pigs.

"In this study, we did something that had not been done before," Mohamed said. "We intervened with the same gene therapy but not during acute heart failure or early in the disease as in our previous experiments, but late in the disease during the chronic phase four weeks after cardiac injury had severely damaged the heart."

Four months after treating the animals, the researchers checked cardiac function and heart structure. "We were surprised to see evidence of significant heart cell proliferation, a marked reduction in scar size and a significant improvement in cardiac function," said first author Dr Riham R E Abouleisa, assistant professor of surgery-cardiothoracic surgery at Baylor. — ANI

The study demonstrates that it's possible to improve cardiac function in an animal model of advanced heart failure.

High demand for Kachin red potatoes in Thailand

RED potatoes produced from Kachin State have received many orders from Thailand, according to red potato traders from Mohnyin township.

“As an overseas market, there are many orders from Thailand this year. Orders come from Myawady-Thailand. There were orders last year, but more have been purchased this year.

So it means the red potato sale is better in overseas market,” said a red potato trader from Mohnyin township, Kachin State.

The red potato is called Myanmar potato, and its colour is pink. It is healthy. It is grown mainly in Kachin State.

In the local market, red potato sales have been increasing, too.

“The red potato sale has been good in the local market too. It is harvested in two batches. Crops harvested in the first batch are nearly out of stock. The next batch will be harvested again after the month of Tabuang,” said a grower.

Red potato is not as big as Chinese potato and can be eaten by making a salad, fried, or pounded.

The wholesale price per viss of mixed small and big-sized red potatoes is from K2,500 to K2,700 while the price per viss of small-sized red potatoes is around K2,500 and big-sized red potatoes is around K3,000, according to Mohnyin red potato market. — Thit Taw/ZS

Counter-argument to false information

False reporting by Khit Thit media regarding security forces, PDF terrorists

THE Khit Thit media outlet is intentionally spreading false information, accusing the security forces of launching heavy weapons shelling on Chipar Village (South) and Chipar Village (North) and seizing over sixty civilians on 14 February.

According to a resident, the security forces conducted territorial security activities in and around Chipar village on 14 February without capturing any civilians. Similarly, PDF terrorists launched an attack by shelling heavy weapons and shooting at the security forces near Thintaw Village in Gangaw Township, Magway Region, on 14 February. Subsequent clashes resulted in casualties among the terrorists, as reported from the ground.

The malicious media outlet, Khit Thit, is intentionally circulating misinformation to conceal the actions of PDF terrorists who launched the attacks. The current incident is also reportedly a form of propaganda, as people have become fearful and reluctant to accept PDF terrorist groups, and no one wants to engage in fighting any longer due to the significant number of casualties among PDF terrorists on the ground. — MNA/TKO

Counteracting false claims: Security forces ensure public safety amid fabricated stories

MALICIOUS media outlets are spreading false news alleging that security forces are forcibly rounding up people in towns and villages, arresting them, and releasing those who pay bribes. Consequently, State-owned media outlets are releasing statements countering these false claims.

To ensure the safety and freedom of movement for people in their daily lives, security forces, Myanmar police force members, and administrative officials are conducting checks for any unfamiliar individuals in households across townships and villages.

During these checks, individuals found residing in a house without informing the relevant authorities, those not listed on household registers, and those unable to produce valid household lists are summoned to the police station and relevant departments for inspection. Those found in violation of regulations will face legal action.

Reports indicate that certain media outlets, aiming to disrupt public socioeconomic life and peace, are fabricating and spreading false news. They intend to incite panic and create misunderstanding regarding the actions of security forces. — MNA/TKO

Misinformation: Political prisoners die after inadequate medical treatment

MIZZIMA News on the Myanmar Facebook page falsely spread the news on 7 February that Ma Yin Moe, a political prisoner from Obo Prison, Mandalay, did not receive enough medical treatment in the prison and died of kidney disease on 4 February. She was initially sent to the hospital, but the hospital did not receive her, and she was sent back to prison.

Regarding the matter, the truth is that the prisoner Ma Yin Moe was treated in the prison hospital from 1 to 10 July 2023 due to heart disease, hypertension, anaemia and emphysema. Through this, she was transferred to Mying-yan District Public Hospital for treatment on 10 July, and the doctors of Myingyan Public Hospital noted that she should be transferred to Mandalay General Hospital for treatment, and she was allowed to be discharged from the hospital on 21 July.

Further, she was transferred from Myingyan Prison to Mandalay Prison on 8 August for further medical treatment. She attended Mandalay Hospital five times and was treated according to the instructions of the senior physicians.

She died of kidney failure and urinary incontinence on 4 February while being hospitalized, said an official from Obo Prison in Mandalay.

Ma Yin Moe, an inmate from Obo Prison in Mandalay, is serving a prison sentence for the crimes of aiding and abetting by pouring gasoline on tyres on a public road and aiding and abetting.

Under the prison law, prisoners who need health care are given health care at the relevant prison hospital and, if necessary, are transferred to public hospitals outside the country for treatment. The report on Mizzima News on the Myanmar Facebook page is a false fabrication to mislead the public. — MNA/KZL

Addressing misinformation: SAC information team provides clarity on military service law

Screenshots validate false claims.

MALICIOUS media outlets are spreading misinformation, alleging that military vessels docked at Myinkaseik jetty are collecting over 40 young residents and forcing them into military service in Kangyidaunt Township, Ayeyawady Region.

Residents have refuted this misinformation, stating that only motor boats and ships anchor at Myinkaseik jetty daily to load food, including rice, for delivery to Pathein, Yangon, and other towns. According to a resident, Myinkaseik village, a trade centre with seven rice mills, is the source of this information.

Similarly, malicious media outlets are engaged in continuous propaganda, spreading misinformation that schoolteachers and students from Pathein University are being coerced into serving at military camps and that 35 youths from Ohnchaw, Seltaw, and Tamotesoe villages in Patheingyi Township, Mandalay Region, have been forcibly captured.

To allay public concern and fear caused by these malicious media outlets, the State Administration Council (SAC) Information Team is providing clarifications through State-owned media about the military service law. SAC has also announced hotline numbers for detailed inquiries about the military service law to prevent public misinformation. — MNA/TKO

S Korea needs to increase productivity amid low birth rate, ageing population: report

Predictions indicate a further decrease to 0.7 per cent by 2040 due to a decline in labour contribution caused by demographic shifts.

SOUTH Korea needs to increase productivity through innovation in a bid to overcome the chronically low birth rate and rapidly aging population, the Korea Chambers of Commerce and Industry (KCCI) said in a report Thursday.

The country's potential growth rate had declined from around 4.7 per cent in the 2000s to under 2 per cent in 2023 after suffering the global financial crisis and the COVID-19 pandemic, it said.

The potential growth rate would tumble to 0.7 per cent in 2040 amid a sharp fall in labor's contribution to economic growth, affected by the low birth rate and ageing population, KCCI said.

The business lobby noted that it would be hard to im-

Anne Frank musical hits Dutch stage, 'we should never forget'

A new musical production based on Anne Frank's diary has hit the stage in The Netherlands, with the producer and star convinced the story needs telling now more than ever.

"Je Anne" ("Yours, Anne")

sticks faithfully to the account of the Jewish teenager whose story of hiding from the Nazis in war-time Amsterdam has become famous around the world.

The stage consists only of a concrete Star of David divided into sections representing the rooms in the "secret annex" where the Frank family and four others hid for more than two years.

The eight characters rarely leave the star, perching on bits of luggage, their only worldly possessions, creating a tense sense of claustrophobia throughout the production.

Producer Mark Vijn said he still gets goosebumps thinking about the couple of hours he spent in the real annex, which was hidden behind a revolving bookcase.

"We were only there for a couple of hours, and they were there for two years. And they didn't know they were going to be there for two years," Vijn told AFP. — AFP

BLACKPINK singer Lisa to star as 'White Lotus' hits Thailand

As one of Thailand's most prominent celebrities, Lisa brings star power to the show.

SINGER Lisa of megastar K-pop girl group BLACKPINK will join the cast of "The White Lotus", HBO said Tuesday, as the third season of the hit TV series moves to her homeland Thailand.

Filming for the latest round of the award-winning dark comedy is set to begin this month in Bangkok as well as the holiday islands of Phuket and Ko Samui.

Lisa, full name Lalisa Manobal, will feature in the show alongside veteran Hollywood star Scott Glenn, HBO's streaming service Max said in a post on its official account on social media platform X.

The 26-year-old is perhaps Thailand's best-known celebrity, with legions of adoring fans and her image plastered on adverts across the kingdom.

Several UK seabird populations in decline due to bird flu: report

SOME UK seabird populations are suffering "widespread and extensive declines" following severe bird flu outbreaks in recent years, a new study assessing its impact for the first time warned on Tuesday.

The report by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) and other conservationists found nine of 13 species had decreased in numbers by over 10 per cent since previous surveys made between 2015 and 2021.

It follows the current H5N1 strain of Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI) becoming widespread in UK wild bird populations, particularly in seabirds and waterfowl, since the summer of 2021.

It also comes after conservationists warned last year that almost half of the breeding seabird species in the UK and Ireland have declined in the past 20 years, with climate change one of the possible causes. — AFP

Japan's currency diplomat says ready to act as needed amid yen's fall

Kanda expressed concern over the yen's nearly 10 yen decline against the dollar in a month, negatively affecting the economy.

JAPAN'S top currency diplomat Masato Kanda said Wednesday the yen's fall has been "very rapid" and driven in part by speculative moves, warning the government will respond "appropriately" if required.

The remarks came after the US dollar hit a three-month high of 150.88 yen overnight, as stronger-than-expected US inflation data reduced market expectations of an interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve.

The yen's fall "has been very rapid, which will negatively impact the economy", Kanda, vice-finance minister for international affairs, told reporters. The Japanese currency "has weakened nearly 10 yen (against the dollar) over the past month".

German auto supplier Continental says to cut 7,150 jobs

CONTINENTAL streamlines global workforce, trimming over 7000 jobs by 2025 amid the electric vehicle revolution.

German auto supplier Continental said Wednesday it would cut some 7,150 posts worldwide by 2025 as the difficult switch to electric vehicles forces companies in the sector to retool.

The group, which makes tyres and supplies components to automakers, said in a statement it would shed 1,750 jobs in research and development.

It would also lose around 5,400 posts as part of a previously announced cost-cutting programme aimed at saving the group 400 million euros ($428 million) by 2025.

Continental, which currently employs around 200,000 people worldwide, announced the plan in November without putting a precise figure on the number of jobs that would go.

"We are aware of the impact on our employees and will do everything we can to find good, tailored solutions (for employees)" Continental's automotive chief Philipp von Hirschheydt said.

The cuts would allow Continental to "focus our resources even more on future technologies for software-defined vehicles", von Hirschheydt said. — AFP

Airbus posts 11% profit drop for 2023

EUROPEAN aviation giant Airbus on Thursday posted an 11 per cent drop in net profit to 3.8 billion euros ($4.1 billion) in 2023, with past charges for its space business cutting into earnings.

The group, which delivered 735 aircraft last year despite supply chain problems, said it plans to deliver about 800 in 2024. It reached the mark in 2018 before the pandemic battered the aviation industry.

And despite the space problems, the profit figure was the third biggest announced by Airbus after its 4.2 billion-euro bumper year in 2022.

“In 2023 we recorded strong order intake across all our businesses and we delivered on our commitments. This was a significant achievement given the complexity of the operating environment,” said Airbus chief executive Guillaume Faury.

The group said it had received orders for 2,094 aircraft in 2023, beating a previous record dating back to 2013.

1 dead, 22 injured at US Super Bowl victory parade shooting

AT least one person was killed and 22 others injured by gunfire in a shooting during the Kansas City Chiefs' Super Bowl victory parade in Kansas City in the US state of Missouri, authorities said Wednesday.

Stacey Graves, chief of the Kansas City Missouri Police Department, detailed the shooting's toll at a news conference and said three people had been taken into custody. She added that fans may have been involved in apprehending a suspect but couldn't immediately confirm that. "I'm angry at what happened today. The people who came to this celebration should expect a safe environment," Graves said.

Police did not immediately release any details about the people taken into custody or about a possible motive for the shootings. She said firearms had been recovered, but not what kind of weapons were used.

"All of that is being actively investigated," she said, adding that more than 800 law enforcement officers were at the scene to keep people safe. "Shots have been fired around Union Station. Please leave the area," the Kansas City Police Department said on X platform, formerly known as Twitter. — Xinhua

Bangkok says work from home as pollution blankets city

BANGKOK city employees have been told to work from home to avoid harmful air pollution, as a layer of noxious haze blanketed the Thai capital on Thursday.

City authorities asked for cooperation from employers to help workers in the city of some 11 million people avoid the pollution, which is expected to last into Friday.

The air monitoring website IQAir ranked Bangkok among the 10 most polluted cities in the world on Thursday morning. Levels of the most dangerous PM2.5 particles — so tiny they can enter the bloodstream — were more than 15 times the World Health Organization's annual guideline, according to IQAir. — AFP

Klinsmann faces sack by South Korea after Asian Cup semi-final exit

The Korea Football Association's national team committee convened a meeting, prompted by the team's 2-0 defeat to Jordan in the semi-finals, placing Klinsmann under significant pressure.

JURGEN Klinsmann looks set to be fired as coach after top South Korean football officials said Thursday that "a change of leadership is necessary" following their Asian Cup exit and in-fighting among star players.

The Korea Football Association's national team committee met a week on from the 2-0 defeat to Jordan in the semi-finals and with Klinsmann under huge pressure.

The committee is not a decision-making body but will make its recommendation to the KFA's executive board, which will make a final ruling on the 59-year-old German's fate.

A smattering of protesters gathered outside KFA headquarters in Seoul, demanding Klinsmann's removal after just less than a year in the post.

"We've reached a consensus that Klinsmann cannot exercise his leadership as national team head coach for various reasons and that a change of leadership is necessary," Hwangbo Kwan of the committee said.

After a three-hour meeting, Hwangbo said the committee had decided Klinsmann's "tactical preparation fell short" during the team's disappointing Asian Cup campaign in Qatar. — AFP

Bayern-bound Oberdorf to become most expensive German female player

BAYERN Munich on Thursday announced the signing of Lena Oberdorf from rivals Wolfsburg for a reported transfer fee of up to 450,000 euros ($486,000).

The 22-year-old will arrive at the end of the season on a deal until 2028, with the reported fee making her the most expensive German female footballer ever.

The highest transfer fee paid in women's football was for Zambian Racheal Kundananji, who joined American side Bay FC from Real Madrid for a reported fee of 735,000 euros ($787,000).

Nadal puts return on ice, admits 'not ready to compete'

RAFAEL Nadal on Wednesday was forced to shelve his plans to return to action at next week's Qatar Open, admitting he is "not ready to compete".

The 37-year-old missed most of last year with a hip injury sustained at the Australian Open before making his comeback at last month's Brisbane International.

However, a small muscle tear then forced the 37-year-old to pull out of this season's first Grand Slam in Melbourne.

The 22-time Grand Slam title winner now hopes to return to the tour at the Indian Wells Masters in California from March 6-17.

"I would have loved to play in Doha, where the tournament team, as well as the amazing Qatar fans have always supported me greatly," Nadal said in a statement on X.

"Unfortunately I am not ready to compete and I won't be able to come to Doha where I really wanted to be and play again.

"I will focus on keep working to be ready for the amazing Indian Wells tournament."

Nadal was named on the entry list last month for the Qatar Open, to be held 19-24 February, and where he was champion in 2014.

Earlier Wednesday, the former world number one, whose ranking has plummeted to 646, admitted he had been suffering "some discomfort these past few weeks and I'm a bit on the limit".

"At this point every blow I take, every injury, is a setback not only in tennis and physically, but also mentally," he told La Sexta television.

He added: "I am 100 per cent confident of being in Indian Wells, it's a very special tournament for me. I don't know if it's going to be the last time I play in it, so I would like to be in Indian Wells, for sure." — AFP

Thailand to offer medical coverage for tourists

THAILAND has launched a scheme to offer visitors up to $14,000 in medical coverage in the event of an accident, the tourism minister said Thursday, as the kingdom seeks to lure travellers back after the pandemic.

The government will cover expenses up to 500,000 baht ($14,000) and pay compensation of up to one million baht in case of death under the new scheme.

Travel restrictions during the Covid-19 pandemic hammered the kingdom's vital tourism sector and arrivals have not bounced back as quickly as officials hoped.

Tourism minister Sudawan Wangsuphakijkosol told AFP the new Thailand Traveller Safety scheme began on 1 January and will run until 31 August.

"The campaign aims to assure foreign tourists that Thailand is safe and everyone will be under good care," she said.

The kingdom has long been popular with young backpackers from around the world seeking sun, sand and adrenalin. But accidents are not uncommon and there have been numerous reports in recent months of young Europeans finding themselves facing big medical bills with inadequate insurance.

The Thai government stresses that the scheme will not cover accidents caused by "negligence, intent, illegal acts" or risky behaviour. — AFP

INDONESIAN Defence Minister Prabowo Subianto declared victory in Wednesday's presidential election, based on surveys by private pollsters, in his third bid to lead Southeast Asia's largest democracy.

Prabowo, a former army general, has won over 59 per cent of the votes cast, the unofficial quick counts conducted by Politika Research & Consulting and other pollsters indicated.

Former Jakarta Governor Anies Baswedan has received some 23 per cent of the votes, with former Central Java Gov. Ganjar Pranowo gaining about 17 per cent, according to the quick count results.

"Our victory will be the victory for all Indonesian people," Prabowo, 72, told his supporters at a sports stadium in Senayan, Central Jakarta. He pledged to "lead, protect and defend all Indonesian people whatever their ethnicity, race, religion, and social backgrounds".

However, Ganjar, who was fielded by the ruling Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle, or PDI-Perjuangan, and Anies, an independent candidate supported by some opposition parties, have not conceded their defeat, claiming they received reports of vote manipulation. — Kyodo

Germany overtakes Japan as third-biggest world economy in terms of nominal GDP in 2023

GERMANY has overtaken Japan as the world's third-biggest economy in terms of nominal gross domestic product (GDP) in dollar terms in 2023, the Japanese cabinet's data showed on Thursday.

The government data showed that Japan's nominal GDP without adjustment for inflation in 2023 amounted to 591.48 trillion yen (some $4.21 trillion).

The Japanese news agency Kyodo reported that Germany's nominal GDP in 2023 amounted to $4.46 trillion. Japan lost its status as the world's third-largest economy to Germany in 2023 as it unexpectedly slipped into recession in the last quarter of 2023 due to a sharp drop in Japan's national currency, the yen, the report said.

Japanese media reported earlier that Japan's nominal GDP in dollar terms would significantly decrease due to the drop in value of the national currency. At the same time, Germany would see a significant growth in GDP against the background of a rapid increase in prices. — SPUTNIK
